LABOR

Is Almost Impracticable on the Pacific Coast

The Railroads are Unable to Transport Crops, and Conditions are Serious.

FARM HANDS GET $5 PER DAY

Secretary Metcalf Talks of the Problem After a Visit to the Coast.

Washington, Sept. 14.—The labor question on the Pacific coast is becoming more serious every day, according to Secretary Metcalf, who has returned from the west. He instanced the fact that the navy yards at Mare Island and Bremerton are working under their capacity by reason of the labor famine. He pointed out that in the west farm hands are being paid as high as $5 per day. The transportation question also was found by the secretary to be serious. He said the railroads can not begin to haul the crops and the passenger traffic is very heavy.

Mr. Metcalf declined to comment upon the causes of the assault upon coolies on the coast and would not make any comparisons between the situation at San Francisco, where the Japanese were assaulted, and cities of Washington and British Columbia, where the presence of the Hindus incited white laborers to violence.

The visit of the Atlantic fleet to the Pacific coast was referred to by the secretary, who said he found one dock on the Pacific side that is capable of taking a battleship, there are a number of private docks that might be available if needed. Of these, three are at San Francisco. The only government dock is at Bremerton and this location, it is believed, makes it likely that the entire fleet may go as far north as Puget sound before returning to Atlantic waters. Concerning this probability, Secretary Metcalf said that there is water enough at Bremerton to take in the entire fleet at one time.

There are a number of important matters in the navy department awaiting Secretary Metcalf's attention. Among them are the contracts for new submarines and torpedo boats. Secretary Metcalf may delay his reports to the president concerning his trip to the coast until the president's return to Washington.

THE WAR TALK

Is Not Even "Respectable Nonsense," Says Former Ambassador Luke
E. Wright.

Washington, Sept. 14.—"Not even respectable nonsense," was the way former Ambassador Luke Wright, who has just returned from Tokyo, characterized war talk between the United States and Japan. The ambassador had a long talk with Acting Secretary of State Adee. Wright was in Japan when the announcement was made that the Atlantic fleet would be transferred to the Pacific coast. He said that the voyage did not stir official circles in Japan to adverse comment, as it was understood that the interests of the United States in Pacific waters made it natural for this government to transfer a part of its naval forces there. The San Francisco incident was not so peaceably viewed. Mr. Wright said, as the action of the school board in San Francisco was of an official character.

Murdered by Employes.

Lodz, Poland, Sept. 14.—Marcel Silberstein, owner of a large cotton mill in this city, was murdered by his employes because he refused to pay them for the time they were on strike.

DESPERATE

WERE TWO ATTEMPTS AT SU-CIDE OF THE LOUISIANA
NEGRESS

Who Profited by the Defalcation of Charles E. Letton, State Tax Clerk.

New Orleans, La., Sept. 14.—The amount of State Tax Clerk Charles E. Letton's defalcation was fixed at $118,000. The examination of his books is not complete, but the experts doing this work said they do not expect to find any larger shortage in accounts. Two desperate attempts at suicide were made by Virginia Reed, the negress to whom Letton says he gave the greater part of the stolen money. Dressed in silks, she jumped in Bayou St. John, a creek in the city, but was pulled out by a negro boatman after she had become unconscious. She was revived by rolling on a barrel. After regaining consciousness she broke away from her rescuers, threw herself flat in a shallow pool and held her head under the water until again dragged out.

SOLD CIGARETTES TO MINOR AND WAS GIVEN FINE

An affidavit was filed in the probate court by Mrs. Alice M. Hoop, charging Marvin Penny, a clerk in a cigar and fruit store on the north side of the square, with selling Paul Hoop a minor, a package of cigarettes. The case was heard before the probate court Saturday morning and the defendant pleaded not guilty to the charge. The court found the defendant guilty and sentenced him to pay a fine of $25 and costs and to stand committed until paid. The sentence was suspended for ten days in order to enable the defendant to make payment. The practice is said to be prevalent in Newark of selling cigarettes and tobacco to minors and the law will be enforced in every instance where the case comes before the probate court.

RETAIL TRADE

Increasing at the Leading Cities, According to Dun.

New York, Sept. 14.—Retail trade increases at the leading cities as the vacation season closes, says R. G. Dun & Company's weekly review of trade, and the opening of the fall lines is attended with the most satisfactory results. As the staple crops are secured and marketed there is a prompt improvement in mercantile collections throughout the agricultural districts, and the decline in prices was especially helpful in stimulating export trade. There is still much conservatism in placing contracts for future business, and decreased speculation is another factor that aids in restoring normal financial conditions. Postponed business is coming more freely to the steel mills and there is less disposition to wait for more favorable conditions. Structural shapes are constantly ordered, especially for bridge work, and the railways seek all forms of supplies in larger quantity than was expected for some months on account of the financial pressure. Iron is maintained by the small decrease in output, several more furnaces being blown out for repairs last month than resumed.

DYNAMITE IN THRESHER.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., Sept. 14.—An explosion of dynamite injured five men and wrecked a threshing machine on the farm of Peter Peterson, near here. Investigation showed that sticks of dynamite had been placed in several bundles of grain.

General Drude's Ultimatum.

Paris, Sept. 14.—General Drude, the French commander, has given the tribesmen until Saturday afternoon to visit him and accept the conditions which he specifies.

DEFECTIVE FLUE

Causes Fire Which Totally Destroyed
the Residence of Mrs. Sarah Hartman, Near Hebron.

(Special to Advocate.)

Kirkersville, O., Sept. 14.—Fire today destroyed the residence of Mrs. Sarah Hartman, about one half mile south of here.

Mrs. Hartman was preparing the noonday meal, when Mr. Lafayette

Wickliffe, who was passing by, informed her that her house was in flames. The conflagration was caused by a defective flue and the entire building was destroyed. Some of the contents were saved, but the estimated loss will be about $1000. There is an insurance of $600 in the Etna company.

A strange coincidence was that just one week ago the barn of Mr. Lemuel White was destroyed by fire. Just a fence separates the building burned today from the one a week ago.

FATAL ACCIDENT TO A HUNGARIAN

STEPPED DIRECTLY IN FRONT OF PANHANDLE FAST PASSEN-GER TRAIN

And Was Instantly Killed About Noon Saturday—Man Not Fully Identified.

The second fatality in the Pennsylvania yards within three days occurred at about 12:30 Saturday noon, when a Hungarian whose last name was Misah, was struck and instantly killed by eastbound passenger No. 18, at the Union street crossing. The train that was responsible for the man's death was in charge of Conductor Benjamin Wheeler and Engineer Arthur Farrow.

The death of the man is due in no way to the train crew, but to his own carelessness in crossing the tracks. A westbound freight was pulling past the crossing and Misah walking around behind the train walked directly in front of No. 18 which was running at a high rate of speed. He was struck by the pilot of the engine and hurled twenty feet through the air. His head was crushed in and his arms and body bruised and broken.

The engineer seeing the man as he walked on the tracks applied the air brakes and brought the train to an almost immediate stop, but it was impossible to avert the accident. The remains were carried to one side and the ambulance of Criss Bros. & Jones called and the body removed to their undertaking parlors, where the remains were viewed by Coroner Marriott.

Just who the man is, is not known, as nothing was found in his pockets except some cigarette papers, matches and tobacco. A witness to the accident recognized him as young man by the name of Misah. What his occupation was is not known and it is not known whether he has relatives in Newark or not.

ONE MINISTER WAS ACQUITTED ANOTHER WAS NOT

Cleveland, O., Sept. 14.—The committee of members of the East Ohio Methodist conference appointed to hear charges that Rev. Charles W. Tinsley of Youngstown, was guilty of heresy, Saturday reported "that newspaper reports of Rev. Tinsley's preaching were such as to indicate that he denied the miraculous birth of Christ, the resurrection and certain other fundamental Methodist beliefs, but that no evidence has been found that he did so believe, and therefore he is not guilty of unministerial or unchristian conduct." The report was adopted by a unanimous vote.

REV. KING'S CASE.

Cleveland, Sept. 14.—The report of the East Ohio M.E. conference's special committee in the case of Rev. W. B. King, pastor of Ulrichsville, Ohio, M. E. church, was delivered to the conference today. Rev. King was found not guilty of lying. It sustained the charge of defamation of character, in that he spoke injudiciously and extravagantly of certain members of his congregation, and found him not guilty of immorality. He was declared guilty of unministerial conduct, however, and a reprimand was recommended. This was administered in executive session today by Bishop Wilson. The charges of chewing tobacco, the committee reported, were too trivial to be reported upon.

ARTIST EARLE'S AFFINITY

Miss Julia Kuttner, the young woman Ferdinand Pinney Earle calls his affinity.

BIDWELL HELD TO GRAND JURY FOR TAKING $8,000

Chicago, Sept. 14.—Benson Bidwell, president of the Bidwell Electric company, was held to the grand jury in bonds of $3,500 by Judge Bettler, on a charge of embezzlement. He was arrested on a warrant obtained by Miss Ida C. Palmer, former secretary of Charles F. Bidwell, secretary of the electric concern. Benson Bidwell was charged with embezzling $8,000 from stockholders in the company by selling stock in the concern without consent and appropriating the proceeds to his personal use.

CHIEF RAISULI GIVES THE TERMS

UPON WHICH HE WILL RELEASE
SIR HARRY McLEAN, EN-GLISH PRISONER.

Makes a Number of Exorbitant Demands for Authority, Compensation and Tribute.

London, Sept. 14.—"Raisuli no longer asks for British or other protection in return for the release of Capt. Sir Harry MacLean, the Englishman who has been his prisoner since early in July," telegraphs a Tangier correspondent. "He is more ambitious and is demanding that he be made the governor of the hill tribes inhabiting a great part of northern Morocco. Furthermore, he seeks compensation for losses and herds which he alleges have been taken from himself and his relatives, insists that some of his former friends be put in chains, and wants to be supplied with magazine rifles and ammunition."

Newspaper Office Dynamited.

Joplin, Mo., Sept. 14.—Dynamite wrecked the pressroom and composing room of the Joplin News-Herald, an afternoon Republican newspaper, which has been conducting a crusade against the city council and the police department. The explosion occurred at midnight.

BUILDING COLLAPSED

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 14.—A four-story brick building on Central avenue collapsed Saturday, killing an unidentified man and burying Mrs. Margaret Daly, a tenant, in the ruins. She is believed to be dead. Two men were badly injured.

When a woman puts a nether ear there is generally a row.

INHUMAN MOTHER KILLS CHILDREN BY STRANGLING

Johnstown, Pa., Sept. 14.—Martha and Catherine, two small children of Mrs. Catherine Thomas, an inmate of the Cambria county almshouse, were found dead in their beds, having been strangled. The mother came down to breakfast as usual and casually remarked that two of the children had died during the night. An investigation was made and finger marks were found on the children's throats. Mrs. Thomas denied that she had killed the little girls, but it is said afterward admitted the deed, saying that she was afraid her husband, who is serving a term in the workhouse for alleged non-support, would take them from her.

NEW COMMANDER

Announced Appointment on Various G. A. R. Committees—Officers Installed.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 14.—Veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic who have been attending the forty-first annual encampment of the organization concluded their business and adjourned until 1908. Installation of officers, adoption of several recommendations from the committee on resolutions and Commander-in-Chief Burton's announcement of appointive officers took up the time. Commander Burton's appointments include the following: Quartermaster general, Colonel D. A. Stowitz, Buffalo, inspector general, J. Corie Winans, Toledo, O., Ohio senior aide de camp and chief of staff, Retiring Commander Brown was made chairman of the committee on pensions.

Cautions Revenue Collectors.

Washington, Sept. 14.—Commissioner of Internal Revenue Capers has written a circular letter to internal revenue collectors and agents in which, while cautioning them not to let up in a vigorous search for violations of the law, he criticizes the "misguided activity" of internal revenue employees in the field. He says their disposition to make "a record" subjects the bureau to endless annoyance and expense, makes a "perfect fiasco" in the courts of their undue and hasty action in seizing distilleries, making unfounded allegations and practical confiscation of property of law-abiding citizens who are endeavoring to do under the law in a business—the whisky business in any of its forms—always open to suspicion.

It is, he considers, drilling to be a dentist.

NEW YACHT

BEING DESIGNED TO COMPETE FOR THE FAMOUS AMERI-CA'S CUP.

Sir Thomas Says If He Does Not Win
This Time He Will Give Up the Attempt.

London, Sept. 14.—Sir Thomas Lipton admitted that the Royal Irish Yacht club was challenging in his behalf and that a cable dispatch was sent to the New York Yacht club from Dublin advising the Americans that a challenge for the America's cup would be forwarded on the Umbria, which will touch at Queenstown Sunday. It was learned that Lipton will be asked to design the challenger, if he is not already at work on the Shamrock IV, for that is to be the new yacht's name. Mr. Lipton is credited with saying that if he does not win this time he will believe it impossible to bring the cup back.

New Measurement Rule.

New York, Sept. 14.—The news from London that Sir Thomas Lipton, in the name of the Royal Irish Yacht club, has sent another challenge for the America's cup, did not cause any surprise among yachtsmen in this city. The new measurement rule, which will apply in connection with the present challenge, has been tried out in fast sailing yachts of the larger class this summer. The old rule made possible the freak racing machines, such as the more recent cup defenders and challengers. If the races are sailed under the new rule, the contesting yachts will be normal, seaworthy boats and not creations to be sent to the junk shop when they have fulfilled their original purpose.

MR. GEORGE P. WEBB IS MUCH BETTER

Mr. Geo. P. Webb, receiver of the Homestead Building Association, and his wife, left Saturday morning for Marion county, to visit for a few days with relatives of Mrs. Webb. During his absence the business of the Homestead Building and Savings company will be conducted by Mr. Joseph N. Pugh, who will receive dues from 7 to 9 o'clock this evening at the office in the Hibbert and Schaus block. A reporter interviewed Mr. Edward Kibler, who is Mr. Webb's attorney, and he stated that he called on Mr. Webb Friday night and found him in all respects rational, and his condition Saturday morning was such as to make it possible for him to take a little vacation. He will return the middle or latter part of next week, and there is no doubt but that he will be entirely recovered by that time.

Chinese Mogul Plague Victim.

San Francisco, Sept. 14.—Chang Mon Wo, president of the Chinese Six companies, was found dead in Chinatown. Death was due to plague. A Greek laborer who was taken ill in a house in Green street also died. The total number of cases to date since May 27 is 24, deaths 13.

MAN IS CRUSHED BETWEEN CARS

Columbus Mogorman Was Standing on the Inside Running Board
When He Was Killed.

Columbus, O., Sept. 14.—The second accident in two days, due to standing on the inside running board of a street car occurred at 8 o'clock last night when Walter H. Jaycox, a motorman on the Summit street car line, was caught between two cars at Summit street and Sixteenth avenue and crushed so badly that he died on the way to Proctor's hospital.

Jaycox last night was acting as a conductor. He was on a northbound car, standing on the inside running board, according to the Columbus Railway & Light company officials, when a Columbus, Delaware & Marion southbound car came along.

As is customary, the interurban car shut off its head light because it was approaching a city car, in order not to blind the motorman of the latter, and probably for this reason Jaycox did not see the heavy car approaching. He was swept from the running board and crushed between two cars.

Jaycox was aged 23 years, and leaves an infant child.

crimination

Which Seeks Relief.

Cook & Company, a partnership, whose place of business is located at Basil, Fairfield county, Ohio, and engaged in the business of merchant millers and dealers in grain, hay, seeds, lumber and builders' supplies, has filed a complaint with the railroad commission of Ohio against the Toledo & Ohio Central Railway company and the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern Railroad company and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad company, charging discrimination against Basil and the complainants in the matter of joint rates on said lines to West Virginia points as against certain other points mentioned in the exhibit accompanying the complaint. The complainants request an investigation by the commission under section 22 of the commission act in relation to interstate rates.

LA FOLLETTE

WANTS THE WISCONSIN DELEGA-TION TO THE NATIONAL RE-PUBLICAN CONVENTION.

But Not in Return for His Support of Stephenson's Senatorial Aspirations.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 14.—Senator LaFollette is said to have informed his friends that under no circumstances is his presidential candidacy to be involved in Isaac Stephenson's aspiration for a full term in the United States senate. He wants the Wisconsin delegates to the Republican national convention, but he is unwilling that they shall be secured by bargaining with Stephenson, either with a view to securing Stephenson's financial support or by using his influence to re-elect Stephenson in return for Stephenson's presidential aspirations.

G. A. PETTIBONE IS A VERY SICK MAN

Boise, Ida., Sept. 14.—George A. Pettibone, charged with complicity in the murder of Governor Steunenberg, was taken to the hospital in a critical condition, and an operation probably will be necessary. There will be no further prosecution in the case at present.

Successful Baking

A Talk with Housewives

If you want to have light, tempting, appetizing biscuits, waffles, griddle cakes, doughnuts—delicate and delicious cakes, and all the other good things in which baking powder is used, try Egg Baking Powder.

Egg Baking Powder insures successful baking. Your quick steps in the haste of preparation or the accidental slamming of the oven door will not result in fallen cake or heavy biscuits.

Egg Baking Powder is made from dried white of egg and wheat phosphates. When water is added, the resulting leavening gas is caught and held in tiny globules by the egg albumen, and it can't get away until your baking has progressed far beyond the danger line where ordinary baking powder "goes dead."

These are facts which a trial will prove. Another thing that's mighty important is that Egg Baking Powder has no cream of tartar, tartaric acid, alum or other harmful substances found in ordinary baking powders, that keep the digestive organs in a constant state of irritation and cause Dyspepsia. We will give $5,000 to anyone who can prove that this is not absolutely true.

Bad baking powder causes many a kitchen tragedy. Think of company coming for dinner and the baking fallen flat! Biscuits like bricks! Cake ruined! Muffins wearing a soggy hood! Only a lot of uninviting and indigestible cookery to show for a whole day's work and worry. No danger of this if you use "Egg."

You save one-third the eggs and all the worry when you use sweet, pure, wholesome and nourishing Egg Baking Powder. Best grocers sell it.

COLUMBUS, O.

GEO. F. BOWERS AND CRISS BROS. HAVE DISSOLVED

MR. BOWERS RETIRES AND WILL SOON START UP IN THE SAME BUSINESS.

Messrs. Criss Bros. Will Continue at the Same Place With Mr. Elmer J. Jones.

A business deal of importance was consummated Friday evening when the undertaking firm of Bowers & Criss Bros. dissolved and became Criss Bros. & Jones, Mr. Elmer J. Jones purchasing the interest of Mr. George Bowers.

The firm, one of the best known in Ohio, has been established for about three years, and has been a wonderfully successful one. Criss Bros. are men of experience in their line of work, and were successful undertakers in Frazesburg and Hanover before they came to Newark for a larger field of work. Mr. Jones is a well known resident of Newark, and while not an undertaker, is a thorough business man and the new firm will probably prosper in the future as they have in the past.

The firm has been located in the rooms at 32 South Third street, and will still retain the same rooms. Mr. Jones, before coming to Newark, lived at London and Columbus, and has an excellent reputation as business man. The new firm will purchase new equipment and will still continue to use a big feature of their business the free ambulance service which will extend to any part of the city day or night.

Mr. George F. Bowers, who retires from the firm, has been in business in Newark for the past decade, and is one of the best known undertakers and funeral directors in Ohio. He is a skillful embalmer, and there is not a detail of the business with which he is not thoroughly acquainted, and to which he always has given his most careful attention.

He started in Newark in the undertaking business with Mr. Lester N. Bradley as partner, and soon this firm had established a large business. Several years ago Messrs. E. J. and D. C. Criss bought out the interest of Mr. Bradley and the business has been successfully carried on under the firm name of Bowers & Criss Bros.

Mr. Bowers announces that he will soon start in business in Newark, and will open undertaking parlors, equipped in every way with the most up-to-date stock and equipment.

Thank Musicians. It is the universal expression of those who were in attendance at the camp fire of the Thirty-First O. V. I. that the singing of Prof. Flora and others taking part in the program was the finest they had ever heard, and they have the thanks of the local committee as well as of all the old soldiers.

Traction Men Here. Norman McE. Crawford, vice president in charge of operation, and D. G. Edwards, vice president in charge of traffic; A. F. Schoof of the Ohio Electric Railway company, were in the city this morning on a tour of inspection and looking over the local properties of the company. They were joined here by General Manager Gibbs and the party proceeded to Zanesville where an inspection will also be made.

Hillsboro "Homecoming." The citizens of Hillsboro, Ohio, are making arrangements for a big homecoming, to be held in that place, commencing Sunday, September 15, and continuing for an entire week. Col. Charles H. Kibler, of this city, was reared in Hillsboro, having lived there from 1832 until 1851. He, therefore, has a kindly feeling for the old town and will attend the homecoming. He left for Hillsboro Saturday afternoon.

A Successful Year. The Church of the United Brethren in Christ has just completed another very successful year. The pastor, Rev. Sager Tryon, is this week attending his annual conference which is being held at Crooksville, O. His report to the conference will show that many advanced steps have been taken during the year. It is the wish of the church that he be retained. There will be preaching on Sunday morning by Rev. J. E. Sharnor on the subject of "A Lapful of Gourds." All are invited.

Veterans Visited Stove Works. During the reunion of the Thirty-first O. V. I. held in this city a number of the old veterans, chaperoned by Regimental Surgeon Dr. J. W. Alexander, of this city, visited the Wehrle stove works. They were all astonished at the immensity of the plant and Secretary S. A. McNeil of Richmond, classed the plant as "one of the seven wonders of the world." All the old veterans were greatly pleased with the city and the treatment they received at the hands of our citizens.

MARVELOUS INVENTION CURES WEAK MEN

Patent Granted by the United States Government.

A new and scientific appliance invented by L. B. Hawley, M.D., will produce full manly power at first application. The effects are immediate and startling to a high degree. Develops, strengthens and cures lost vigor. Positively no failures. Physicians endorse and use it in their practice. If you are the least skeptical as to the value of this remarkable treatment, send for illustrated circulars, take them to your family physician and get his opinion. This is the first time any one has requested you to take his circulars to your family physician. Why? Simply because he knows your physician will not recommend his treatment. Not so with this appliance. Your doctor will immediately grasp the idea, and when he does, he will recommend it. Nothing like it has ever been sold before. It works the same on every individual. Send to-day for free descriptive circular of this wonderful instrument. The moment you see it you will realize its possibilities. No C. O. D. or free trial schemes to catch the unwary. This is a plain business proposition that will appeal to you as the greatest opportunity ever offered to those who are weak. Address L. B. Hawley, M. D., 1291, Wisner Building Rochester, N. Y.

THE WATER WORKS ISSUE.

The same common sense business principles used in the transaction of private affairs should be employed in dealing with municipal problems. Oftentimes politics, selfish interests, extravagance or don'tcare-itiveness play the leading role.

The people of Newark are confronted with a problem which may be solved on Monday, or it may, by the voters' decision, remain a vexed question to be finally settled at a latter day. The Advocate believes that the time to settle it is right now.

Newark must have a water system
—but shall the city have one or two?

Which is the wiser thing to do—reject the proposition to buy the old plant and complete the new, or purchase the present water system and
"tie it in" to the partly completed
municipal plant?

What would a first rate business man do under these circumstances if he were acting for himself and not for the city? Answer that question to your satisfaction and then vote accordingly on Monday.

To the Advocate's mind it is clear that the thing to do is to get rid of opposition if it is feasible to do so;

in other words, buy the plant if the price is not exorbitant. But is the price too high? How shall we tell?

The water plant has an intrinsic value and it has an earning power which possesses value as truly as do pipes and pumps and reservoir. The company's figures show a net earning power of about 10 per cent. on the price asked of the city. The old plant might be reproduced for a less figure than $200,000, but that is not the question—it is worth many dollars to the city of Newark to get the old company out of the way and thereby divert the money now going into the company's treasury into the city's coffers.

If the city plant is completed independent of the one now serving the city, it will be a bidder for business, but how many private consumers will rip out the present service and take on the new just for the sake of making the change? Plumb-ing costs money and digging up one's premises is not to be desired. Without private consumers, how is the city to pay interest on $600,000 or more of bonds, meet the running expenses of the plant and keep up repairs?

The water company will continue to supply its customers with water at as cheap a rate or cheaper than the city can furnish it.

It is all very well for some people to tell the old water company to go to the woods or elsewhere, but it will not go! It will still be here doing business at the old stand, and the people will be paying in increased taxation for the privilege of putting out fires by water from a city plug instead of water from a privately owned plug. The city will save $13,500 it annually pays for fire protection, but figure out for yourself what it will lose on interest and other expenses.

These are plain facts that can be substantiated. The Advocate would like to buy the old water works for $50,000, if possible, but it believes that the plant cannot be purchased for a dollar less than $200,000, and in view of all the circumstances, it favors paying the price—for the good and sufficient reason that it will mean money in the taxpayers' pockets to do so. It will settle a question which, if not decided now, will arise to bother the people for years to come.

WHY?

Why did the Service Board, after wasting over a year's time in doing nothing, get busy so suddenly and lay down 15 miles of pipe, as claimed, on streets where the old pipes are laid,
after the City Council had taken action providing for the people to have a chance to vote on the question of purchasing the old plant? Why were not these pipes, or at least a portion of them, laid on other streets where there are no pipes and where pipes are needed?

Municipal ownership of water works should be sane ownership.

If the people of Newark only want one water works system in the city, instead of two systems rivaling each other in business, the only thing to do is to vote in favor of purchasing the present plant at the election next Monday.

Mr. Veach makes a clear showing in his statement that if the proposed new water plant is completed and attempted to be run in opposition to the present plant, the city will suffer an annual deficit of $21,440 or more. This is the important fact to consider when you vote next Monday.

If the people vote down the proposition to purchase the water works plant, it means there will be two systems in Newark, providing the scheme of building another system at a cost of between $600,000 and $700,000 is carried out. Then there will be two systems rivaling each other in business, and the city's plant will not pay operating expenses.

If the people of Newark only want one water works system, all owned by the city, they will vote YES on the proposition submitted at the election next Monday. As a common sense business proposition, Newark should have but one water works system. Then municipal ownership will be a financial success.
Otherwise it will be a signal failure.

SHALL IT BE SQUEEZE OR A SQUARE DEAL? ASKS WM. A. VEACH

Manager of Water Company Gives Two Reasons Why People Should Vote to Purchase.

For over fifty years I have lived here in Newark and I expect to end my days here. My business interests are all in Newark. Nearly all my friends live in Newark. Do you then think I will misrepresent to you, my fellow citizens, the facts of which I in my eighteen years experience in the water business have become informed?

I do not think I know it all regarding the business. I have spent one-third of my life time in managing this plant, and assisting in the general oversight of other plants, but I have in that time learned that a lifetime's study is none too long to enable a man of average ability to master the profession.

Therefore, I say to you who are to decide the question, "To buy or not to buy," out of the kindness and good feeling that I entertain toward you as my fellow citizens and out of whatever of knowledge and skill I may have acquired in my chosen profession, that for at least two good reasons you ought to vote "yes" on the proposition.

These reasons are:

First—It is the business thing to do.

Second—It is the honest, just and square thing to do.

If any one doubts the truth of these statements, I only ask that he bear with me long enough to learn the grounds upon which I base them.
The members of the city council almost unanimously and irrespective of party have declared themselves in favor of the ordinance for purchase as follows: "That it is necessary to issue and sell the bonds of the City of Newark, Ohio, for the purpose of purchasing the water works plant known as The Newark Ohio Water Works Plant," etc. The City Council is legally, the business manager of the municipality and surely its conclusions resulting from a careful study of the conditions ought to have considerable weight.

Is it, not good business for the city to purchase? Is it not always profitable to eliminate competition, especially where you acquire the large net profits of a going concern in so doing?
If the city buys, it will acquire a net annual earning sufficient to pay the entire yearly interest debt on $500,000.00, which amount would represent the city water bond indebtedness, including the $200,000.00 paid to purchase the present plant. This, in itself, is a big element of value—
also means that the cost of operation will be paid out of these same earnings and that municipal ownership will be self-sustaining from the start.

Besides the income, the city gets first class reservoir capacity, thoroughly tried and tested; an excellent modern filtration system of two million gallon capacity which,
with natural filtration in the clear water well amounting to a half million more, can easily and inexpensively be increased in capacity to 3-1-2 million gallons daily the estimated expense of the extension being only $15,000.00. In this connection, I will say that the filter plant can be dismantled and sold for the amount of Mr. Chapin's estimate, and an offer has recently been made for similar property at as good a price; a power plant which can be utilized as a duplicate system or dismantled and sold to advantage to one of the many small cities that are installing water works plants; lastly over thirty miles of pipe, thoroughly seasoned and in practically as good condition as the day they were laid. Upon this pipe system are over 2,650 private consumers' taps yielding an annual revenue of over $26,000.00. The reservoir, filter and practically all of the pipe system can be used to excellent advantage by trying in with the present city system
as constructed.

It is said that some fourteen miles of our system will be paralleled when the city plant is completed. A portion of this is necessary in order to establish a larger circulating and reinforcing system to furnish adequate fire protection to the outlying factory districts. The balance of it by being kept in use will afford ideal service to private consumers. In effect providing a large main for fire protection and a smaller main constantly circulating fresh and clearer water for private consumption.

In this connection, I wish to say that almost all of the pipe which has been properly paralleled is small in diameter, so that the total value of this pipe according to the appraisement is comparatively insignificant.
Let us look at the reverse side of the picture. Suppose the city does not buy. Then it must build. According to its experience, up to date, it will cost to complete the municipal plant including reservoir, filters, and 25 miles more of mains, something above $300,000.00, maybe $400,000.00, or a total water bond indebtedness of from $600,000.00 to $700,000.00. Thus, it will cost at 4-1-4 per cent., $27,000.00 to $30,000.00 annual interest. It is fair to assume that a politically managed plant of 50 miles of mains will cost more to operate than one managed by private interests and only 30 miles in extent. It costs the present company $18,000.00 annually to operate. Assuming the impossible, that is, that the city can operate as cheaply as a private plant we have.

Interest charges $27,000.00 or more
Operating expenses 18,000.00 or more

Total $45,000.00 or more

Now what is there to meet this?
First, assume that competition will reduce the present domestic revenues of the old company to $20,000.00 and that the city will eventually get half of this business or $10,000.00. Add to this the present hydrant rental and we have:

Private consumers $10,000.00
Hydrant rentals saved 13,500.00

Total income $23,500.00

Leaving an annual deficit of $21,440.00 or more.

Contrast this with the results of a purchase. On the one hand, the city has a clean slate, on the other it loses annually $21,440.00 or more, besides perpetrating a gross wrong and injustice upon the people whose money has given Newark fire protection and water service for twenty years.

You may ask will the present company continue to operate after the city plant is built?

Yes, most assuredly, we will run and take care of our customers, meet any competition and endeavor to furnish better service than ever. We shall be able to greatly reduce operating expenses by cutting out the high pressure fire protection feature, and free public water service. One of the greatest drawbacks to our present private service is the high pressure made necessary by fire protection requirements, which every one knows is very hard on plumbing. When the city no longer needs our ENTIRE hydrant system we will have the right and it will be good business for us to entirely discontinue hydrant service.

It is the honest, just and square
thing to do.

Our Board of Trade is for and all of its existence has been endeavoring to attract capital to our city. It invites all sorts of investment that is calculated to build up and improve Newark.

Twenty years ago we were crying for help. We couldn't build or own our own water system—we couldn't attract factories, without one. The people who today own this plant came forward, invested their money in Newark, relying upon its future as a live town and upon the honor and good faith of its citizens. They never made money out of the plant. It has been a struggle for existence for years; it has never been a better than 6 per cent. investment up to the last few years.

Now, fellow citizens, these people have their money invested here, buried in the ground. They have not been your enemies, have they? Their every act has been beneficial to Newark, generally, hasn't it? Now do you believe it is honest, just and square to practically confiscate their property by taxing the people to maintain a competitive plant AT A LOSS simply because you have the legal power to do it?

I may be considered a sentimentalist, but I must confess that I have so firm a belief in the good faith and sense of fair play of the people of Newark generally, that I do not doubt but what this old water company will in any event retain the major part of its private patronage. At all events it is likely that the average water taker will give up his present water service, connections, and go to an expense of from $15.00 to $30.00 just for the privilege of taking water from the municipal plant when he can probably get the water as cheap or cheaper from the old company?

It is claimed in figures just submitted to the public that to buy and tie in the old plant to make it equal to a new one will cost nearly $80,000.00
more than to complete the city plant anew. The time is too short to adequately criticize and revise these figures, which entirely ignore any value either in the filter or power plant which are conservatively appraised by Mr. Sherman, city engineer, as worth $47,900.00 and would in themselves cut the $80,000.00 to $32,100.00.

But let us for the sake of argument adopt the $80,000.00 figure. Isn't it better to pay $80,000.00 for an income that will save you over $22,000.00 per year? Less than four years will see this $80,000.00 paid.

Respectfully submitted,
WM. ALLEN VEACH, Agent.

CITIZEN WRITES A CARD.

The American Tribune very mildly says it is not in favor of the purchase of the water works, but rather intimates that if a few dollars were cut off the price asked for it, purchase would be favored. I gather this by reading between the lines rather than in the actual words used. The Advocate, I see, favors purchase and gives good reasons for it, yet says it does not want to force its views on the people and offers to print the expressions of the taxpayers. I would unquestionably favor paying $200,000 for the old plant were it not for the fact that several miles of the old system have been paralleled by the new, and I am almost persuaded that it would be good business judgment, anyway, to pay the price and let the city have a water system that will more than pay expenses. To complete the new in opposition to the old will mean a balance on the wrong side of the ledger for years to come.

WHY WAS $280,000 DEMANDED FOR NEW WATER WORKS

At the Last Special Election, When the Service Board Claims Only $241,000 is Needed Now?

Editor Advocate—The American-
Tribune publishes figures furnished by W. C. Christian of the service board, as an argument against the purchase of the old water works plant. These figures make the claim that the complete new plant the city is building will cost in addition to the sum of $300,000 already voted for, the sum of $241,000, or a total cost for the city's proposed new plant of $541,000.

Now I wish to remind the public that at the last special election for water works bonds, the people were asked for an additional bond issue of $280,000.

If, then, only $241,000 will be required to complete the city's new plant why did the Board of Public Service want $280,000 of additional bonds saddled on the city at the last special election? If $241,000 is all that is needed now, why was $280,- 000 demanded then?

What were they going to do with that other $39,000? INQUIRER.

HOME BUYER ENTERS COM- PLAINT.

(Communicated.)

It is proposed that the city of Newark buy the old water works plant at a cost of $200,000, and the citizens will vote for or against this proposition next Monday. The question has been opened up for discussion in the newspapers of the city just in time for one expression of the people before the vote is to be taken. Is this just to the citizens of Newark? Is the question of so little importance that it needs no discussion? Or have the people such confidence in the daily press of the city that they will read the advice given in its editorial pages on Saturday evening, walk to the polls on Monday morning and vote accordingly, conscientiously feeling that they have done just the right thing? The channel through which the voters get their education upon such questions has been closed completely and the intelligent thing for them to do now is to vote no, if for no other reason than that there has been no public discussion of the issue. If it is a mistake not to buy the old water works, the mistake can be rectified.
If it is a mistake to buy, and the people vote to do so because of a lack of education, it is then too late and the burden is upon us.

HOME BUYER.

The above claim that no opportunity has been afforded in these columns for the discussion of the water works proposition until now is devoid of truth. These columns have been open all the time for the discussion of this question, just as the Advocate's columns are open all the time for the discussion of all public questions. No communication upon this subject has been refused admission to these columns.

ARGUMENT FOR PURCHASE.

The consulting engineer in his report makes the statement that $300,- 000 will complete 15 miles of the proposed water system.

It must be remembered that it will require about 60 miles of pipe to make a complete water system
for fire and private consumption, and then add a filter plant at $50,- 000, and you have a sum which must reach beyond the million mark.
It is idle to talk that $600,000 will complete the plant when the half of that amount is consumed already and only 15 miles of the 60
have been secured.

Another important matter in connection with this vexed question is this: How are you going to procure the money to complete the work when the legal rate of taxation has already been reached? The question is a plain one. If the city purchases the old plant they come into possession of revenues which will pay the interest on the bonds and pay running expenses. Under present conditions you are paying interest on the bonds without any immediate relief from any source.

M. R. H.

THINKS PRICE TOO HIGH.

I am against the purchase of the old plant because I think the price is too high. I admit the advantage of having but one water system and am hesitating about spending $600,- 000 or more for a new plant, with another running in opposition, but feel that the owners ought to take about $150,000 for it. A. B. C.

TAXPAYER FAVORS PURCHASE.

I favor the purchase of the old water works for six reasons: First,
it is good business sense to get rid of a competitor who has a "cinch"
on the business; second, it would be virtually impossible to get the business away from the private company, as people would not want to tear up their yards just for the

WM. C. CHRISTIAN OF SERVICE BOARD AGAINST PURCHASE

Figures and Arguments Presented by President of Board Concerning Waterworks Problem.

To the Citizens of Newark—

I have been requested to present the side of the opposition to the purchase of the Newark water plant, as may be seen by those opposed to the purchase. I regret that more time was not given in which to gather the points, but will do the best I can under the circumstances. The purchase of the Newark water plant at a price, at which the city of Newark can use it, is another matter. That is not the question, but should it be bought at $200,000? Is it worth the price to the city? The greatest argument that may be advanced for the purchase at $200,000, is the securing of a going concern and the elimination of competition.

Elimination of competition is a factor to be reckoned within private enterprises, and what for? Simply to maintain established prices, and to be in a position to raise them at will, and in order to do this, business interests pay a bonus or premium of thousands of dollars, expecting to be repaid by the consumer. A municipality is differently situated. It enters the field of operating public utilities, not primarily for the revenue it produces, out to operate it for the people, asking only a price sufficient to operate, maintain, and provide a sinking fund for the redemption of the bonds. The object of the city in controlling their water supply, naturally produces the same results as competition. Now as to the revenues. Mr. Veach shows that the net revenue to them other than the hydrant rental is $8658.43, let the city reduce the price 25 per cent and what becomes of this net revenue? As the revenue decreases the value as a going concern falls, and the supposed income that is expected does not materialize. At no time will the city reap above amount.

Completing the municipal plant independent of the present water company, and having competition, the plant can be operated for five years without a cent of income, and still be no worse off financially than had we paid $200,000 for the present plant, in order to secure the income. At the same time, competition has saved the individual consumer not less than 25 per cent of his water bill or in round numbers, $7000 each year. This is the most extreme position that may be taken, because the municipal plant will secure revenue, the company has more to fear of the competition than the city of Newark. Does it occur to you that in paying $200,000.00 the city is paying about $83,500.00 more than to complete the new plant, or in other words, the city is paying ten times their net revenue to get rid of them.

Should the city purchase the plant, it will have invested $500,000.00 and have two separate plants. To operate them economically we must spend more money to readjust the system, because we will have 14-15 miles of streets that will have the pipe of both systems and leaving about the same number unsupplied. To remove this pipe so as to reap the most good, means the tearing up of the greater portion of the streets just replaced to remove the pipe, and opening a like amount to lay them. What would this cost? A table of cost has been carefully prepared and is printed on this page.

It means for instance—to take up pipe in West Main street and remove them to Williams street. A low estimate of taking up the pipe is 23 cents per foot, relaying it will cost 21 cents per foot, replacing the pavement 10 cents per foot, the pipe costs the city 52 1-2 cents per foot, if the old is bought, costing laid in Williams street, $160 1-2 cents per foot; whereas, 6 inch pipe is now being laid new, at 51 cents per foot of pipe plus cost of laying, 21 cents, or 72 cents per foot.

This does not include any loss from breakage in the old pipe.

It may well be stated, that the city would pay the present owners within 5 per cent of their own appraisal, for that which is available.

As to the probable cost of completing the municipal plant, there is no difficulty in estimating the cost, if intelligently handled, the same argument is true in regard to reconstructing the old plant to conform to the new, and the chances are that they may be greater, anyone rebuilding, experiences an outlay far in excess of what he contemplated.

The figures may be seen elsewhere on this page.

The same amount of fire hydrants as the completed plant would have would cost under the rental contract $19,445.00, this is the amount that would be saved to the city, if operated independently. To purchase and reconstruct the old plant the annual interest charges will be at least $27,900.00, whereas, the new plant would be $24,300.00.

In regard to the immediate income, it must be considered that on every street in which the lines are duplicated, the old pipe will be removed and thus every house connection must be disconnected and connected to the new pipe, causing more tearing up and expense. Invariably, the pipe of the new system are larger than the old, and to remove them would destroy the efficiency of the plant for fire.

The foregoing arguments are the principal ones advanced, as against the purchase at the price of $200,000.00. W. C. CHRISTIAN.

WATER WORKS DISCUSSION

sake of changing from one system to another, unless they profited by it, third, considering the earning power of the old company, the price is not too high; fourth, a municipal water plant cannot be a financial success while having a well managed competitor in the field; fifth, a combination of the new and old plants will not only be cheaper to the city than an entirely new independent plant, but the plant will be equally as good and the earning power vastly greater than a city plant with opposition. Personally, I wish the old plant had been bought before certain streets had been paralleled by the new pipe lines, but it is better to buy even now than to proceed independently. In the last place I favor the purchase of the old plant, because it will settle a vexatious question that otherwise is bound to trouble the city and harass the taxpayers for years to come. Even if I thought the price of the old plant $50,000 too high, which some maintain, I would still favor purchase, believing that the great advantage of giving the water business over entirely to the city would more than offset the disadvantage of paying more than the old plant is really worth. TAXPAYER.

THOS. H. SITES' VIEWS.

In compliance with your request in yesterday's Advocate, I herewith give you my views on the water works question. Nearly two years ago I wrote several articles in favor of buying the old works, and am still in favor of it, and my reasons are the same now as then. We had a committee appointed at that time who went to Columbus with three sections of pipe taken up in different parts of the city and their report was that they stood 50 pounds more pressure than new pipes are required to stand, and that the power house was in good condition, boilers intact, Rochester filtering works in good order, water pressure of the same O. K. and everything first class in every particular. I thought then that this favorable report would end the water works question, by the purchase of the old company's property. The old company has the best water in the state and the pressure is from 30 to 40 pounds more than Columbus or Zanesville or any other city in the state. In addition, the city will not only save $3,000 as rental, but will derive a revenue of $20,000.00 to $30,000 for house rentals, whereas, if there are two companies, how is the city going to make it pay to run her works? The streets will again be torn up worse than ever, and the citizens are perfectly satisfied with city water as it is, and don't want their yards or grounds torn up again and be compelled to go to the expense of making new connections. PARALLEL PIPES

Observer Makes a Few Observations on Progress of Work on the New Plant.

The old water works plant covers about 30 miles of streets, according to the figures of the company, of which about 15 are paralleled with the pipes of the new which are now being laid. Of course if the old plant is purchased these will have to be taken up and re-laid elsewhere where there are no pipes.—American-Tribune.

Editor Advocate: The above statement from the American-Tribune deserves special attention from Newark tax-payers in considering the water works proposition to be voted on at next Monday's election.

When the city council first took action on the water works question by passing the resolution providing for figures on the valuation of the old plant by competent engineers, not a mile of new pipe had been laid on streets parallel to the old plant's pipes. In fact the present Board of Service had remained idle for over a year without doing anything whatever toward building the city's new plant.

Then when the engineers some months later made their reports on the value of the old water company's property, the claim was made by the Service Board that FIVE MILES of the old plant's pipes had been paralleled by the laying of new pipes.

But the Council proceeded to pass the resolution providing for the submission of the proposition for purchasing the old plant and the public supposed of course, that there would be no more tearing up of streets where the old pipes were laid until after the people had a chance to vote on the question of September 16.

But now the people are informed by the Service Board in the columns of the American-Tribune that 15 MILES of the old plant's pipes have been paralleled.

It is certainly startling to the average citizen and taxpayer that the Service Board that had remained idle for over a year should get busy so suddenly pending the election that was to take place, as to rip up ten more miles of streets where the old water pipes were laid and parallel them with new pipes instead of laying these new pipes on other streets where there are no pipes.

OBSERVER.

(The Advocate is compelled to eliminate the remainder of the foregoing communication for want of space. The writer contends that the action of the Service Board in rushing ahead and tearing up streets where the old water pipes are laid instead of awaiting the result of the election on the 16th inst. (next Monday) was done for the purpose of forcing the people to vote contrary to their sentiments and differently from the way they had all along determined to vote.)

"Doan's Kidney Pills have been a family remedy with us and it has never failed in a single case. My trouble was kidney complaint and backache, brought on, I think, by the jarring of the engine. It affected me in the small of the back and every throb of the engine seemed to make the pain almost unbearable. The trouble was so deep seated that it defied all my efforts to cure it. After trying many different preparations in vain a friend who had been cured of similar troubles by Doan's Kidney Pills advised me to try them and I got a box at Crayton's drug store. The treatment with Doan's Kidney Pills rid me of all the trouble. My wife also used Doan's Kidney Pills for backache and kidney trouble and found a quick and complete cure. I know of many railroad men who have used this remedy for the same trouble that I have heard of they have done the same good work."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Youngstown winning a double bill from the Rubbernecks yesterday gives the Newark aggregation a boost towards the top in the percentage column.

We are only eight points behind Akron and eleven behind Youngstown. Akron has won one more game and Youngstown two than the Molders, while we have lost one more than either of those clubs. That certainly looks good for the locals. If we can beat out Marion and Mansfield while the Champs and Rubbernecks are thrashing it out we will be all the more before the latter part of next week.

A letter from President Morton to Secretary Hopkins this morning states that it is his honest opinion that the Newark team will win the pennant. Perhaps it is only a jolly on the part of the president of the O. P. league, and perhaps he honestly means it. Anyhow, time will tell. The Newark club has received a rotten deal on numerous occasions from Morton and he has sanctioned outrageous conduct on the part of Walter East and his players. The crooked ex-football manager is out for the pennant and will stop at nothing, no matter how little or degrading it may be. In the Newark-Akron series recently he instructed his players to slide into every base which they were running. Murray was scratched badly as was also Smith. The Akron players sharpened their spikes in the club house with a file and they were told to use them. It took Bob Berryhill to settle them. After Gygi was forced from the game when he complained of Bannion's rotten decision for calling a player safe at the plate that was out by at least two yards, Bob put on Gygi's shoes and sent word to the Akron bench that his spikes were an inch long and the first man that slid into first base or stepped off the sack would get his. He told Caffyn that if a player attempted to slide in feet first he would step aside paying no attention to the ball but would afterwards pay his respects to the player. There was no more sliding into first trying to spike someone for Bob had blood in his eye and the Rubbernecks knew it.

The above only illustrates to what extent Walter East will go in trying to win the pennant. He has not landed it yet by any means and it is right, never will.

Manager Bob received a phone message this morning from Zanesville stating that "Red" Davis would report in this city for duty either tomorrow or Monday. When Bob phoned from Sharon that we would not need a new man he was under the impression that Schweitzer would be able to get back into the game the first of next week. Now that he has found that it will be impossible he will try and strengthen the team by the addition of a new player.

The Molders are battling with Marion this afternoon. They will also be here tomorrow. Monday and Tuesday we play Mansfield and Wednesday and Thursday the Marion bunch will be back for three games. The double-header will probably be played on Wednesday although this has not been definitely decided upon.

Sharon 4, New Castle 3.
Sharon, Pa., Sept. 14.—Malarkey Lested Sten in a pitchers' battle yesterday. Both pitchers were in fine form and were effective with men on bases. Sharon won the game in the ninth when Clever doubled to right, went to third on Mattison's sacrifice, and scored on Green's long hit to left. Mattison played a star game both in fielding and at the bat. Sellers stole home in the sixth with the tying run. Sten had a home run. Score:

Youngstown, Sept. 14.—Both games of a double header and first place were captured by Youngstown yesterday. Akron was shut out in each battle. The first was easy, the Champions winning 5 to 0. B. MELANGE OF SPORT.

Youngstown turned the trick yesterday in a double header. The two games copied by Youngstown aces the Molders a nice boost. Jack Taylor of the Chicago Cubs drew No. 25. He has put up a great howl, as he will not share in the championship series receipts.

Take your wife, sister or some other fellow's sister out to Wehrle and help win the pennant for Newark by rooting loud and long.

We still have a splendid chance to win the pennant. In fact since the Youngstown team copied the double-header yesterday, Newark's chance to land the rag is about as good as either the Champs' or Rubbernecks'.

They are kicking in Cleveland because Jennings and his men engage in real live, sure enough coaching, claiming that it's rowdy.

Middlefielder Carter of Sharon, has been released and will play with Lancaster the rest of the O. P. season. Lancaster badly needs an outfielder.

Fred Jean, the Akron polo star, declares he'll be back in the Interstate this season. Neither the money nor the rinks in New England look good to him.

Chas. Roy, the Indian pitcher secured by Manager East to finish the season with Akron, will probably be out of the game for good. The split finger secured in the game with Mansfield on Wednesday is a bad one and has put the big fellow out of business. East is securing another pitcher to replace Roy. Goodie will probably not be used much more, but kept as a reserve.

"Youngstown is not playing ball," says Tim Flood of Marion, "and with a decent catcher we should have won from them easily in every game of the series just closed. They could not hit our pitchers, but when a man secured a base on balls he traveled all the way to third without any danger of being caught."

Pitcher Cy Young III. has been signed by the Pirates. Will anybody recall his name sixteen years from now?

Bill Stamp's injured bad is improving nicely and there is thought to be no danger of blood poison now.

The American league color scheme will be materially enhanced by Catcher Blue, of Columbus, who has been trapped by the St. Louis Browns, and by Pitcher Green of Burlington, who has been captured by the Chicago Whites. Green was called "Hetty" in the Iowa league, and the nickname probably will follow him to the Johnson organization.

Connie Mack says that Rube Vickery once of Brooklyn and Cincinnati, and with the Athletics this spring, is the greatest minor league pitcher in the country, but will not do for the majors.

Trenton now owns Allie Strobe, having purchased him outright. It is said that Trenton has cleared $12,000 on the season. A dispatch from that city says that Manager Carney has secured Randall and Sweeney of the Boston Nationals for next season.

As a pitcher who is able to trim the leaders, no one in the National league has anything on Howard Camnitz. The young Pirate delivery clerk has beaten the Cubs every time he has faced them, and has topped the Giants into the dust on three out of four occasions.

Stanley Dean, a well known fan of Detroit, dropped dead Thursday as LaJolie struck out when a hit would have won. He died from heart failure induced from excitement.

Sammy Wright (true sportsman) is still bellowing over the signing of players by Akron to help finish out the season. Both he and Walter Football East are acting like little seven year old kids.

Youngstown and Akron will resort to any kind of tactics to win the pennant. Nothing is too dirty or contemptible for them if it will only give the team an advantage. Talk about true sportsmanship! When a manager instructs his players to go in and win even if it requires the spiking of players on the opposing teams it is time that a halt was called.

An umpire in Akron or Youngstown is in danger of his life if he does not favor the home team. Indeed, they are intimidated before the game to such an extent that they invariably give all close decisions, and some that are not close, to the home team. They are constantly reminded that they may be assassinated if they don't help the home team win.

All games at Wehrle park for the balance of the season will be called promptly at 3 o'clock. Be on hand early and help root for the Molders. If we can capture a goodly number of the games yet to be played on the local grounds we stand a good chance of landing at the top of the column.

Recently Ban Johnson wrote his umpires asking them for suggestions as to how the games could be shortened. Of course all the arbitrators sent in their replies, including T. Hurst. The poorly and witty member of Ban's staff sent in his reasons, but couldn't refrain from ending up his letter as follows: "If you are in earnest and really want to shorten the games, try seven innings." It was good enough to cause Ban to smile.

Walter Football East is out in an interview Thursday in which he has already started the baby act. Among other things he said: "I don't care if the Youngstown management gets as many players as it likes, within the rules of the National association. There's one thing I do hope and that is that Newark won't take advantage of the fight between Youngstown and Akron and win out after all."

Wouldn't that make you choke on your gum?

In baseball parlance the left-handed pitcher may be all right.

GIRL PITCHER THE WINNER

Miss Alta Weiss the wonderful Vermilion girl baseball pitcher, twirled for the Bellevue team against Chicago Junction and won by the score of 6 to 5 Thursday. Miss Weiss put up a grand game in the box. Miss Weiss struck out 11 of the Chicago Junction players. She allowed but six hits and passed only one man. But for errors by her teammates she would have held the Chicago players down to two runs.

Columbus, O., Sept. 14.—There was a decisive break in the local telegraphers strike when eight former striking operators, including the vice president of the local telegraphers' union, returned to the Postal. Superintendent Collins said that the Postal company had within the last day or two been able to re-open several branches in the Cleveland division. Officials of the Western Union Telegraph company stated that they had taken back several operators, and officials of both companies declared that while the volume of business is smaller than normal, everything offered is handled with reasonable dispatch.

Slew Her Lover.
Columbus, O., Sept. 14.—Edith Thornton Carson, 24, shot and killed A. A. Manley, 36, with whom she has been living for the past few weeks. Both parties are colored and came here from Cleveland, where it is said the woman has a husband living. Manley's home was in Dayton. Jealousy prompted the crime, which was committed while the man was asleep in bed. The woman surrendered to the police.

ELKS STAG OUTING A GREAT SUCCESS

FINE TIME ENJOYED BY ANTLER-ED HERD ON BEACH ISLAND
FRIDAY.

Elegant Banquet and Splendid Program—Large Number of Visitors Present From Sister Lodges.

The Elks last stag outing of the season occurred Friday and it was a decided success in all particulars. Over one hundred of those who are known as the "Best People on Earth" left Newark Friday morning at 9:15 on a special car for Buckeye Lake, where they boarded a steamer of the Del Fisher Boat Line company and were taken to Beach Island. Upon arriving there they found the committee had made ample provisions for their entertainment. A sumptuous lunch was spread from 10 until 2 o'clock, consisting of everything that a lot of hungry fellows might like. And the boys went to it in the proper manner just to show the committee that they appreciated their efforts.

The banquet was served between the hours of 2 and 4 and a description of same is almost impossible owing to the great variety of viands prepared by skillful chefs to allure the taste of the most fastidious epicureans. It was served in the large club house banquet hall on a long table and the horned antlers participating tried to break up eating record causing smile after smile to flit across the face of "Uncle" Joe Kuster, who was the caterer for the occasion. Col. W. C. Wells, who ably assisted in preparing the bill of fare, looked after the "bunch" and saw to it that no one went hungry. It was a feast that will be long remembered and was thoroughly enjoyed by those fortunate enough to be present.

The time on the island was spent in story-telling, talks by the members, horseshoe pitching, social card games, boating, fishing, securing of kodak views of the beautiful scenery adjacent to the island and last, but not least by any means, an improvised program by "Brownie" and his assistants which was participated in by nearly all the boys present.

It was a gala day and the glorious weather combined to make it one long to be remembered in the history of Newark Elldom. The Newark lodge had as their guests a large number of visiting brothers from the sister lodges of Columbus, Lancaster, Pittsburg, Zanesville, Marion and Upper Sandusky.

LODGE NEWS

Knights of Pythias.

An enterprising Pythian lodge in Ohio each month appoints from among its active members a committee of one to personally call on five other members who do not attend lodge or pay up promptly. He ascertains from those brothers the reason for their absence and endeavors to get a promise from them to attend the next meeting. The plan has proved very successful.

The order has lodges in every state and territory of the Union, and also in Mexico, Cuba, Canada, Hawaii and the Philippines.

Make the order stand for something and then do your part in bringing it to the favorable consideration of the membership of the world.

Roland lodge, No. 305, Knights of Pythias, held its regular meeting on Tuesday night with a good attendance of the members. The Page rank was conferred on several candidates after which those present enjoyed an oyster supper. At the meeting on next Tuesday night the Esquire rank will be conferred on a number of candidates.

Red Men.

The cheerful, light hearted brother who greets you with a friendly smile and a brotherly hand clasp is a booster, not only for the fraternal organization of which he is a member, but for everything else with which he comes in contact. He is the sunshine of life, while he with the perpetual frown, who is always looking for trouble, who sees nothing good in any one or any thing, is the dreary day and the carrier of a perpetual wet blanket. Be a booster—it costs nothing and will make the world seem more beautiful, and at the same time you will strew the pathway of others with roses and a portion, at least of God's sunshine.—Insignia.

EAGLES.

An aerie of Eagles will be instituted in Johnstown, Wednesday, September 18. The Newark team will confer the degrees, and will be on hand 75 strong. All charter members are requested to report without fail by not later than 6 p. m. next Wednesday. A preliminary meeting will be held at the Independent office next Monday night and the charter members and all Eagles are invited to be present to arrange for the supper and other important matters. Don't fail to come Monday night and all who have subscribed on the charter list must be on hand for the Wednesday night institution of the aerie. Those who have not subscribed and are desirous of joining in with the charter list should all be on hand for after the aerie is instituted no one will be admitted at the price made to charter members. The indications are that the new aerie will start off with at least 75 members. Remember both the Monday night meeting and the date of the instituting of the aerie.—Johnstown Independent.

Modern Woodmen.

Cedar Camp, No. 4727, Modern Woodmen of America, met in regular session on Monday night with all officers and 142 of the members present and was by far the best meeting that has been held for some time. Visitors were present from Zanesville, Hebron, Alexandria and Columbus. Seven applications for membership were received and acted upon and elected to membership. The escort retired to the ante room and found four candidates in waiting: Anson Davis, W. J. Cox, Daniel Murphy and William Wilson, who were adopted as beneficial members of the Camp. Several more candidates were expected at this meeting for adoption as their certificates are in the hands of the clerk and they were expected to be at this meeting. At the next meeting of the Camp which will be held on next Monday evening there will be several candidates to receive the work and big turn out of the neighbors is desired. Remember neighbors that the fall and winter work has started and that there will be work every Monday night and we expect to see a good turn out on every meeting night. We have started the wheel to grinding for the 1200 mark, and every neighbor is requested to bring in at least one candidate before the first of the year, as we want to retain the state banner for another year. Zanesville and Columbus have made the boast that they will take the banner away from Cedar Camp and they are working hard to do so, but we are still in the lead and neighbors with your help we will stay in the lead. When the 1200 mark is reached, all neighbors who have brought in a new member will be entitled to a seat at the turkey roast that will be given by Cedar Camp, which will be one of the swiftest times that has ever been given by the Camp. Now neighbors get a hustle on yourselves and get in on this. Come to the next meeting of the camp and we will show you a good time.

The Modern Woodmen's suspension department has done good work. It was organized and began operations on January 1, 1905, and during the years 1906 and 1907, the number of temporary suspensions was reduced, 18,378 and the number of reinstatements increased 22,902, indicating that the department during these two years effected a saving in membership of 41,280, or 20,000 members per year.

Masonic.

A special meeting of Warren Chapter No. 6, R. A. M., will be held on Monday, September 16, when there will be work in the R. A. degree. No master is a success who does not preside over his lodge with decorum and dignity. The Missouri Freemason believes that a lodge ante room should be large, well furnished and comfortable and furnish a rendezvous for the socially inclined brethren, where they may sit and smoke and chat to their heart's content.

The new Masonic home being erected at Meridian, Miss., will be arranged on the cottage plan, with a central building and cottages for the residents. A chapel and a hospital will be added later.

Past Master A. Haynes of Woburn, Mass., has a remarkable Masonic record. For forty-one years he has not missed a regular or special meeting of his lodge.

So far as we have observed, the material now offered is of the best and no harm can result from the large increase of members, if there continues to be a careful inspection of the character of those who are thronging our portals.—Square and Compass.

Odd Fellows.

Newark Lodge No. 623, I. O. O. F., had only routine business last Monday night, but received five applications for membership. Newark lodge is in a prosperous condition. They have several on the sick list, but they are improving. We boast that there is not a lodge on earth that looks after its sick better than the Odd Fellows. We pay $4.50 per week sick benefits and furnish a nurse when required. Every Odd Fellow is invited to come any Monday night to our hall, east side of public square.

American Insurance Union.

Newark Chapter No. 24, A. I. U., held a very interesting meeting on Thursday evening with a full attendance. The warm weather is over and members can offer no excuse for not attending the meetings from this on. The fall campaign of member getting is now on and every member should bring at least one application to the next meeting. Remember your work is not completed in fraternal insurance by payment of the small assessment each month and then remain away from the meetings. An increase of membership must be maintained at all times in fraternal insurance, so "all join hands and circle" in your friends to the order.

National Representative Charles B. Hill of Pontiac, Mich., was present, and gave a very interesting talk under the good of the order.

The first dance of the season will be held the first week of October. Stevens' orchestra will furnish the music.

The degree staffs will reorganize next Thursday evening and a full attendance is desired.

Stationary Engineers.

International Association of Stationary Engineers will meet Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The presence of every member is requested.

Fall styles Knox and Hawes Ha's are now on sale at Hermann. The Clothier.

AMUSEMENTS

DANIEL BOONE TONIGHT.

A thrilling story of pioneer days, "Daniel Boone on the Trail," comes to the Auditorium tonight. Daniel Boone's story is known by old and young and the thrilling tales of this first and greatest pioneer has thousands of times been told until today Boone stands first in the hearts of his countrymen. Charming Leona Leslie appears as Elizabeth Zane who so bravely defends the fort to save the lives of hundreds of men, women and children. Her stealing the powder in full view of the Indians and under their direct fire makes a climax never to be forgotten. Rolling Thunder, a full blooded Sioux, a graduate of Yale, appears in the character of the Great Chief "Blackfish."

"CRIPPLE CREEK" PLEASES.

The long heralded "Cripple Creek" came to town Friday, and judging from the almost continuous applause from a large audience, the play was a big success as a stirring melodrama. It was typically western in all its phases and if it was intended as a "thriller" its mission was fully accomplished. The cast was well balanced, Joseph Stanhope, Jesse Hale, Maria LeBarry, Helen McCabe and Little Estelle being the best in the cast. Little Estelle as "Little Toto" was good and the child actress took her part much better than some members of the cast. Her voice was strong and the way she played "Little Toto" was decidedly pleasing.

ORPHUM THEATRE.

The bill next week comprises six acts of the first calibre. Owing to some complications in booking the Newark vaudeville lovers are having a chance to see in each and every act playing here this season a top-rotcher.

The bill is of surpassing interest, full of variety and life from start to finish.

Leonard & Lester have by far one of the cleverest comedy sketches so far seen here this season. Their dialogue is repeated with witty sayings, new and laughable.

WEDDINGS.

Friday at 3 p. m. Rev. L. C. Sparks joined in marriage at his home on North Fifth street, Mr. Edward H. Drew formerly of this city, but now residing at Columbus, and Mrs. Loreta Weisler of Newark. They will make their home in Columbus.

On Friday evening at 8 o'clock Mr. William Kilpatrick of East Newark, and Miss Mary J. Burkholder were united in marriage in the presence of several witnesses. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. W. Locke at the East Main street Methodist parsonage. Mr. and Mrs. Kilpatrick will begin housekeeping at 119 Oakwood avenue.

Mother's Friend

Rings Round Eyes

The ill's peculiar to women, take different forms. Some ladies suffer, every month, from dark rings round their eyes, blotches on their skin and tired feeling. Others suffer agonies of pain, that words can hardly express. Whatever the symptoms, remember there is one medicine that will go beyond mere symptoms, and act on the cause of their troubles, the weakened womanly organs.

SENTENCES

PASSED ON PRISONERS WHO PLEADED GUILTY IN COMMON PLEAS COURT.

Young Man Goes to Mansfield For Horse Stealing, Another to the Penitentiary.

In the suit brought by Frank Myers vs. Trustees of Hopewell township the arguments of counsel were made to the court. The suit is brought to restrain the defendants from diverting the flow of water from the public highway on to plaintiff's land. Norpell & Norpell; Swartz, Kibler & Montgomery.

State of Ohio vs. Albert Green. The defendant was indicted for stealing two horses and a buggy, the property of Lewis Spellman. A plea of guilty was entered, and the defendant who is 19 years of age, was sentenced to the Ohio State Reformatory at Mansfield. He has lived here about five years and came from Johnstown to Newark. At the time of the commission of the crime the defendant stated that he was intoxicated.

State of Ohio vs. Albert McVey, indicted for forging a check for $7.35 on the First National bank, purporting to have been signed by G. Sui-ton. He was arrested in Zanesville and has been in jail here since May 15. A sentence of two years in the penitentiary was what the court thought McVey should receive, and it was so ordered. He is a tool dresser, in the gas business, and said he was seeking to drown family troubles in drink, and that had he not been intoxicated he would not have committed the offense. In passing sentence upon the defendants the court said that he thought that 99 per cent of all the criminal cases which find their way into the Court of Common Pleas are directly traceable to the use of intoxicating liquors.

George Morrow vs. William Beall, leave given to answer in 30 days. Smythe & Smyth; Norpell & Norpell. Thos. J. Vannestrand vs. Mary Ann Vannestrand, et al, order of sale set aside, Mary Ann Vannestrand electing to take the premises at the appraised value. Russell & Horner; Iory & Flory.

He says his labor was worth $60 a month, and that he expended $75 to cure himself. Smythe & Smyth, attorneys.

HERR SPIEGELBURGER-SUCH A PICNIC VAT ITT VAS!

THE WORLD'S BEST SHORT FICTION

A Little Flyer in Love---By Lloyd Osbourne

I KNEW it was Edith Champlain the moment I entered the car and followed the porter to my seat. In fact, I felt so sure that I completely lost my head as to everything else; and, on being asked, I could not remember whether I was a through passenger or not. The darkly gentle brought me back to mundane affairs and his eyes clouded with suspicion as he insisted on seeing my ticket.

"But the lady?" I said.
"What lady?" he demanded.
"The one down there with the bunch of flowers and the candy," I said.
"Your wife, sir?" he said.

I felt like saying that she might have been—had she wanted to—but refrained in time.

"No," I said. "I only wanted to know where she was going."

"Haven't taken her up yet, sir," said the porter. "Can't say, sir."

He was whisked off at this juncture by two elderly ladies and I was left to my own reflections. I had spent two years in trying to get Edith Champlain out of my head, and, until I brushed past her in the aisle, I should have said that I had done so with some success. At any rate the old wound had ceased to hurt, and there were even a few new dents on a heart I had once professed as wholly hers. Now I awoke to a full realization of my own weakness, and found with dismay that time had been less my friend than I had hoped.

I went into the smoking-car to think the situation over and have the benefit of a quiet talk with myself. It would be weak, it would be silly, it would be downright madness, to voluntarily expose myself again to those poignant emotions. Was I a moth or a sensitive business man named Phipps, nearing the thirty-second year of his mortal span? I decided impressively that I was the latter.

Besides, apart from all that, it would be undignified to again seek Edith's acquaintance. It would embarrass her and me—equally. When chapters are closed it is well to let them stay closed. Heroes on the stage, after tearing their hair and retiring in a frenzy, never returned to talk about the weather. Why should I? I rang the bell and getting my own porter, ordered him to change my berth in the car ahead and shift my things from the other. Half a dollar settled the difficulties he was inclined to make, and, leaning back in my chair, I breathed the deep sigh of a resolute and level-headed man.

Then, when the victory was won, and I began to pat myself on the back and total up my credit side with the world—health, money, the capacity to make friends and keep them—the silly ass suddenly commenced to waver. He got up. He made a pretense of looking out of the window. He threw away his half-smoked perfect. Then he made a bee-line through the train and never stopped until he had reached Edith Champlain's seat.

"Edith!" I exclaimed.
I think she turned pale when she saw my face. You see she had cared too—a little.

"I was waiting for you to come," she said. "Sit down, won't you, Jack?" I did so, taking the opposite seat. "So you were sure I would come?" I said.

"Aren't we old friends?" she returned.

"I don't know that I'd call us that," I said.

She looked a little hurt. It came over me that I had forgotten how beautiful she was.

"I thought it was agreed we were always to be friends," she said softly, "when—when—"

"My recollection is that you did most of the talking that last time," I remarked. "My memory is that you were going to be a sister to me."

"I never said anything half so banal," she broke out. "I was as nice as I knew how, and when you went away without a word and didn't even take the trouble to write to me—I felt terribly bad."

"So did I," I remarked.

"Surely there are other things in the world besides marrying people," she said.

"I didn't think so then," I said.

"I notice you say then," she returned.

"Oh, I found heaps afterwards," I returned.

"What sort of heaps?" she asked.

"Business," I said. "Money. Success."

"No women?" she persisted.

"Yes—and women," I returned.

"I suppose I've no right to ask you about them," she said.

"If it comes to asking—" I said, and looked down at her hands.

She held them up to me with a pretty gesture.

"Not yet," she said smiling. "There is still hope for you, Jack."

Our eyes met, and the mockery in hers faded me with exasperation.

"I didn't come back here to make love to you," I said. "I never meant to speak of the thing at all if you had not brought it up. I'd feel a contempt for myself if I slid back into being your old dog Tray again."

"Oh, I understand exactly," she said. "You were always cruel even when you were devoted to me the most. Now you wish to show me how completely I've lost you."

"I hope it gives you a pang," I said.

"It does a little," she confessed. "I didn't want to marry you, but I always liked having you around."

"That's the kind of thing that drives a man to desperation," I said.

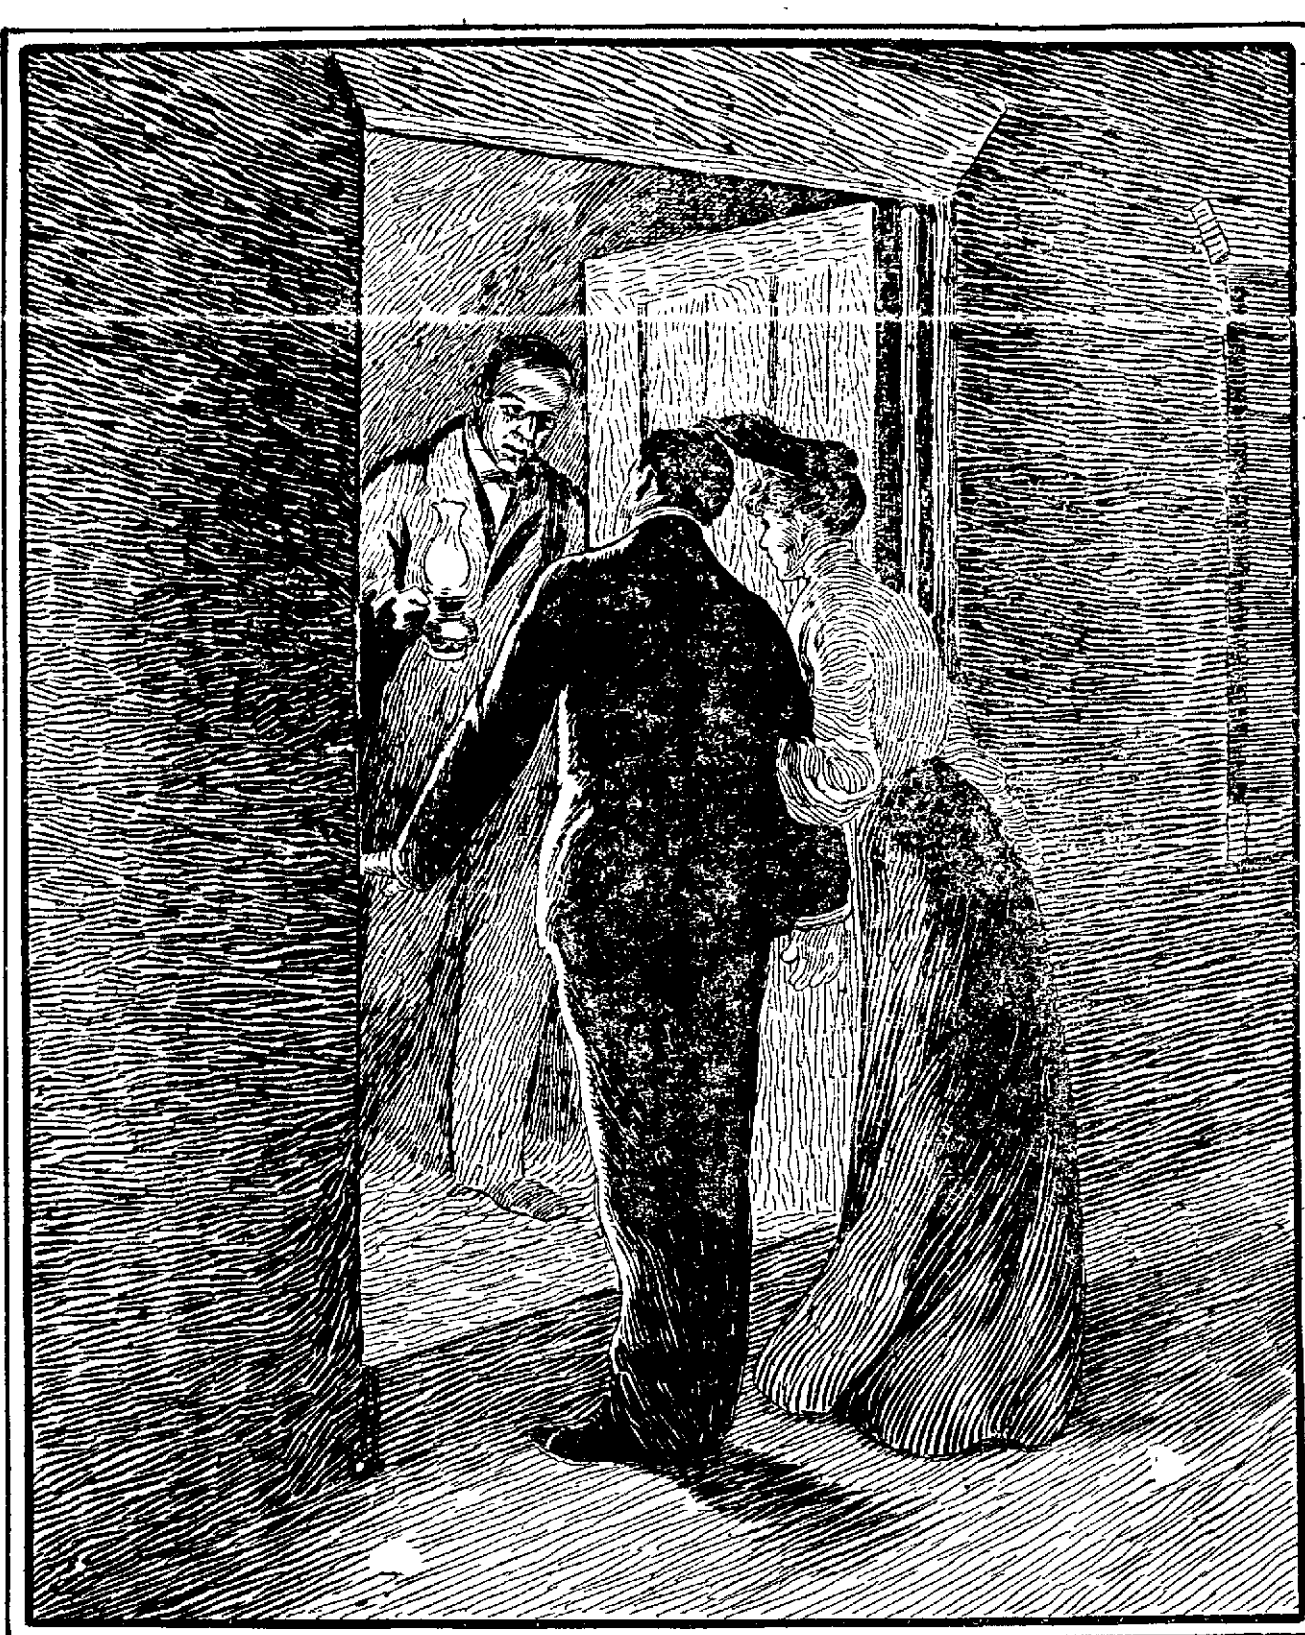

"Do you know I think you have improved a great deal," she said. "I don't believe any woman now could twist you around her little finger as I used to do."

"Thank you," I said.

"I thought I'd mention it," she said. "It's like the Blue and the Gray for us to be together again," she went on. "Two old generals talking over the bygone battle, you know."

"I guess I must have been the Grey," I remarked. "If I remember right they were the under-dog in the transaction."

"But it is beautiful all the same," she said, "and awfully tender and touching; and then in a battle somebody's got to win, you know, and now when it is all finished and done with, and the old bitter feeling has died out, and they respect each other for being brave and chivalrous, and work them-

"You're the elopers," he said genially. "Glad to see you."

"Don't stop," I said, as she hesitated.

"You don't know how nice you look when you glow."

"You haven't any poetry in you," she broke out.

"I'm afraid this old general's a beast!" I exclaimed. "He doesn't glow a bit, only turns red all over with resentment. He remembers how the other general fired on flags of truce, and burned his hospitals full of wounded, and acted throughout with incredible treachery and deceit."

I fully thought she would color up and deny it with vivacity. In your year together I had learned how well able she was, when pressed, to rend me to tatters with her tongue. Her gentleness now abashed me.

"I was younger then," she said.

"I wish you wouldn't be so infernally sweet about it," I said.

"Did it hurt you?" she said. "Really and truly, Jack, did it hurt you?"

"It took me two years to get over it," I said. "That is, if it is over."

"Oh, I think it must be," she returned, with a shade of sadness in her voice.

"Well, I'll touch wood anyway," I said.

"You wouldn't care to come back then?" she asked.

"Edith!" I cried, starting in my seat. "If you'd say to me—Do you mean that you—"

"I didn't mean anything of the kind," she said quickly. "I don't know what made me say it. I suppose I wanted to hear what you'd say."

"You came mighty near hearing it," I said bitterly.

"Besides, I want to spin you out for my trip," she went on. "Make you last—like a box of candy."

"You did wonders with the last box—I ran it through a whole year if I remember—and then threw the empty old thing out of the window."

"I hated to see it go," she said.

"You are the most cold-blooded creature that ever lived!" I exclaimed. "If you liked me less I wouldn't mind, but you know you really like me tremendously."

"You oughtn't to complain of that," she said.

"I don't want to be anybody's candy," I said.

"It's awful how fast we are getting through the box," she returned. "I'm going to put it away now before we reach the bottom layer."

"What does that imply exactly?" I asked. "Am I dismissed? Do you want to read your book?"

"I only want to pull up the conversation," she said.

"Would I be overstepping the bounds if I asked after your mother?" I said.

"Oh, she's well," she returned.

"And your father?"

"He's well, too."

"I could keep up this kind of thing forever," I said. "Where are you going to anyway?"

"Same old place," she returned.

"Butte, Montana?"

"Lucky Butte," I said. "Happy Montana. But are you all alone? Isn't there any one with you?"

"Oh, of course, papa insisted on my maid going with me, and I was willing enough until I found out that I was expected to pay the maid's ticket out of my poor little allowance."

"What are passes for?" I demanded.

"Oh, the pass-factory was shut, you know," she returned. "Papa quarreled with the railroad. They wouldn't endorse him for Senator, and so he broke the loop by blocking the San Luis Obispo street franchises; and now one can't go a mile on their horrid cars without paying two and a half cents in advance. Well, that settled the matter. I needed all my money for the races."

asked.

"Oh, he said he was glad I understood the value of money."

"And so you are all alone," I said.

"Don't say that word while I have you, Alfonso," she exclaimed dramatically.

"Yes, I am going through," I said.

"And if I can be of any service you will please command me."

"You have an awfully winning nature," she said, "and you were always the dearest boy at running errands, and no back talk, either."

"I wish it wasn't such a one-sided arrangement," I said.

"It's up to you to make it reciprocal," she returned.

"I tried and failed," I said.

"If I were a man I'd never say die," she returned.

"Oh, Edith," I said, leaning forward, "how can you—"

"When I say candy you're to stop," she interrupted.

"But you didn't say it!" I exclaimed.

"Candy!" she cried.

"And when I talk commonplaces it means I hate you," I said.

"Just say weather and I'll understand," she said. "Now you can go and smoke a cigar. If you are going to revive all the old feeling I must put on a clean collar and a perfectly killing waist I have in my dress-suit case. I want to make it worth your while to love me."

"Oh, I don't want to go," I said.

"Now jump up before I can say candy," she exclaimed.

I obediently sought the smoking-car, and, looking at my watch, settled myself comfortably in a settee for an hour of waiting. I was glad in some ways to get a moment to myself. My head was in a whirl and I wanted to think things out. It was indeed a singular sensation to find myself once more in the thrall of that inveterate little coquette, and to piece together, little by little, the disconnected threads of our half-laughing flirtation. I had thought myself so strong, so free, and here I was tied hand and foot again to her reckless little chariot wheels. Yet was she a coquette? Had I not perhaps been stupid in accepting her refusal so readily that afternoon two years ago? With a dozen men at her feet, and amongst them some that nine girls in ten would have taken gladly, she had at least remained unmarried, and even unengaged. Of course she was very young—only nineteen when I had first met her—and with all her apparent light-heartedness she was undoubtedly pleased to see me; and some of the things she said re-echoed in my ears with a little convincing note of sincerity.

It was pleasant to lean back and think of her, so radiant, so charming, so gay. What was the good of saying I did not love her as much as ever? By Jove, more if anything; and it gave me a strange feeling of remorse to think I had fought for the transformation. By the time the hour was up I was on the most excellent terms with myself, and had even contrived in my mind to dovetail in a little trip to Butte in the near future. True, it would cost me about eighteen hundred dollars to manage it, but what was the good of being well off if you never spent your money? I'd call it my little flyer in love, and if the stock took the right turn perhaps I might come out ahead of the game after all.

I was unprepared for the transformation in Edith's appearance. She was the picture of exquisite freshness, and her beauty seemed enhanced by her own pleasure in looking her best. She was, moreover, in as good a humor as I, and we laughed like children from sheer pleasure as we had a little table euchre for chocolate creams. I could not but notice the indulgent glances of the rest of our fellow-passengers, and felt indeed that the men might envy me the companionship of this young and beautiful woman.

"All the world loves a lover," I said.

"Why, you as good as told me you weren't in that class any more," she said.

"That hour in the smoking-car settled it," I said.

"Oh, I'm glad it's settled," she said.

"I was afraid you were going to say candy," I said.

She looked up from the outspread game and our eyes met. I was but the thing of a second. Yet when I took the card she gave me my hand trembled.

The afternoon slipped quietly away, the latter part of it spent on the platform of the observation-car, where we sat side by side on a couple of stools and saw the State of California disappearing behind us. It was hypnotizing to watch the track as I vanished endlessly in our wake; hypnotizing, too, to be so close and so silent, our reflections drowned in the reverberation of the train. Edith remarked that it was like a whole week of biography. I said it was like a man's life, to speed thus into the unknown by the side of the woman you loved. I might have said a lot more in this strain if it hadn't been so hard to talk; Edith saying, besides, that my shooting tickled her ear. The sun set. The slanting shadows ushered in the dusk; the evening star peeped out and vied with the newest of new moons. A waiter gave us the second call to dinner but we remained unmoved.

We slowed down at a miserable little settlement and a brakeman ran along the train swinging his lantern. An unknown voice, distinct through the summer darkness, said that we were at Santa Anita. Another voice said the we had been flagged. We listened without concern. Then the door behind us was swung open and our privacy was invaded by a party of four. They were all men of the bulky Western type, middle-aged, sloppily dressed, and one stood out from the rest by reason of the silver star on the bosom of his coat and a significant bulging of his hinder pocket. They were plainly all citizens of Santa Anita and were evidently acting with some united purpose.

"Are you Miss Turtill, Miss?" demanded the one with the star.

"It's them all right," said another voice, with ominous conviction.

"Tall dark fellow, about thirty," contributed another. "I guess this is the bird."

"Sorry to trouble you, Miss," said the sheriff to Edith, "but we'll have to take you off this train."

I sprang to my feet.

"You needn't worry about it," said the sheriff to me. "You're it too."

"What tonfoolery is this?" I demanded fiercely.

"My name is Edith Champlain," I said, "and I am a passenger to Butte. I will show you my ticket and you can read my initials on my dressing-case. You are obviously mistaking this gentleman and me for somebody else."

"No mistake about it," ejaculated the sheriff. "You are Cynthia Turtill, aged twenty, and I've been telegraphed from San Francisco to hold you and your companion as elopers; and what's more, Miss, your distracted popper will be here in an hour by special train."

"I tell you, you are making a mistake," said Edith. "I won't let you touch me."

"Now, see here," I said, strangling my anger and attempting to keep cool, and look at my letters, and things to find out what infernal asses you are making of yourselves. I have a letter of credit for two thousand dollars, a card-case, telegrams, a bill from my club—"

"Ain't he slick," said a voice.

"Keep your soft soap for the gals," said the sheriff. "You're up against men in Santa Anita."

"Call yourself men!" I cried as I saw them laying their hands on my shrinking Edith; and, inflamed to frenzy, I took one step forward and struck the fellow under the ear.

When the battle haze lifted I found myself with a black eye, a lip swollen to the size of a potato, an ache in my left side where I thought there ought to be a rib, my hat gone, my coat torn half-way down the back, and my wrists decorated with a pair of handcuffs. I had a vision of the express whisking into space, and Edith, beside herself, struggling in the arms of two of our persecutors.

"Now, gentlemen, to the jail," said the sheriff, and with that we started to march, accompanied by a dozen loafers who had risen spectrally out of the dark, and who were murmuring disparaging remarks about me. My heart misgave me as I saw the place contained but barely twenty houses, if so many, and it sank into my boots as we were led into an old adobe building with its windows barred with iron. Here, in a sort of office, innocent of all furniture except a table, a chair, a campaign portrait of President McKinley, two Winchester rifles, a spittoon, a book the size of a hotel register, and some paper and writing utensils, we were made to undergo some of the formalities of the law. I was entered on the record under the unassuming appellation of John Doe; Edith was made to figure as Cynthia Turtill, spinster, aged twenty years, held by instructions from San Francisco, as being under age, and in the act of eloping beyond the bounds of her native State. This done, I was led into a cell and had the door slammed on me, while the clang of another, and the rasping of a lock, showed that she, too, had been meted out a similar fate.

Fortunately, though bruised and sore, I had come to no serious harm. I sat on my three-legged stool, and, lighting a cigar from the solitary candle—the handcuffs were horribly in the way,—tried to recover something of my outraged composure. By degrees I grew more and more cheerful, and even winked up a smile over our absurd predicament, and settled myself in patience to await the arrival of Turtill.

My reflections were interrupted by the jingle of keys and the reappearance of the jailer. His large, fat, stupid face betrayed some anxiety.

"I guess you'd better come along and keep the little lady quiet," he said.

"She's having a caninption fit,"

It may be imagined that I took him at his word. I was led down the passage, and shown into Edith's cell, where I found the poor girl herself, utterly unstrung, moaning aloud, and with the tears streaming down her face. She gave a cry of joy at the sight of me, and caught my manacled hands and held them. The jailer regarded us both with marked depression.

"You've got a lot to answer for," he said to me. "I'd rather be a horse-thief than the kind of man you are."

"I didn't surprise me if old man Turtill carried a gun—and got to using it."

This seemed a favorable moment to enter into some explanations, but the sheriff shut me up with a wave of his hand.

"If you think you can 'lick yourself out of this mess you are mighty mistook," he said. "I don't know just what the penalty is, but you're going to get it in the neck, sure; and if there should be any gun-fight, old man Turtill can rely on the sentiment of this community to clear him in time to catch the morning train. If you were anyways a man you'd out with the truth and own up," he said. "You'd go down on your knees and beg her forgiveness. Haven't you done her enough harm already by winning her poor little heart?"

This view of the affair made Edith and me laugh in spite of ourselves. With me by her side she had regained her courage, and she looked wonderfully handsome and imperious as she ordered the sheriff to unlock my handcuffs.

He listened quite unmoved.

"Young lady," he said, "you can take your choice of having your beau with his handcuffs on—or no beau at all."

"Would you mind very much, then, if I ask you to leave us to ourselves?" said Edith.

"Mind!" he exclaimed. "Not on your life, and, heaving a sigh, he departed.

I tried to take Edith's hand, but at the sight of my manacles and my awkwardness in them she ripped over with laughter. I confessed I was a little hurt by her merriment. The position was distinctly humiliating.

"You dear old Jack," she said, "there's only one way to take it, and that is as a tremendous joke."

"It would be jokier if these things weren't three sizes too small," I remarked.

She bent down and looked at my wrists, and then uttered a little cry to see them swollen and discolored.

"Oh, you poor fellow," she said, and putting her lips to the aching flesh gave me the balm of a dozen soft kisses.

"Edith, I love you," I said. "And you'll only tell me—"

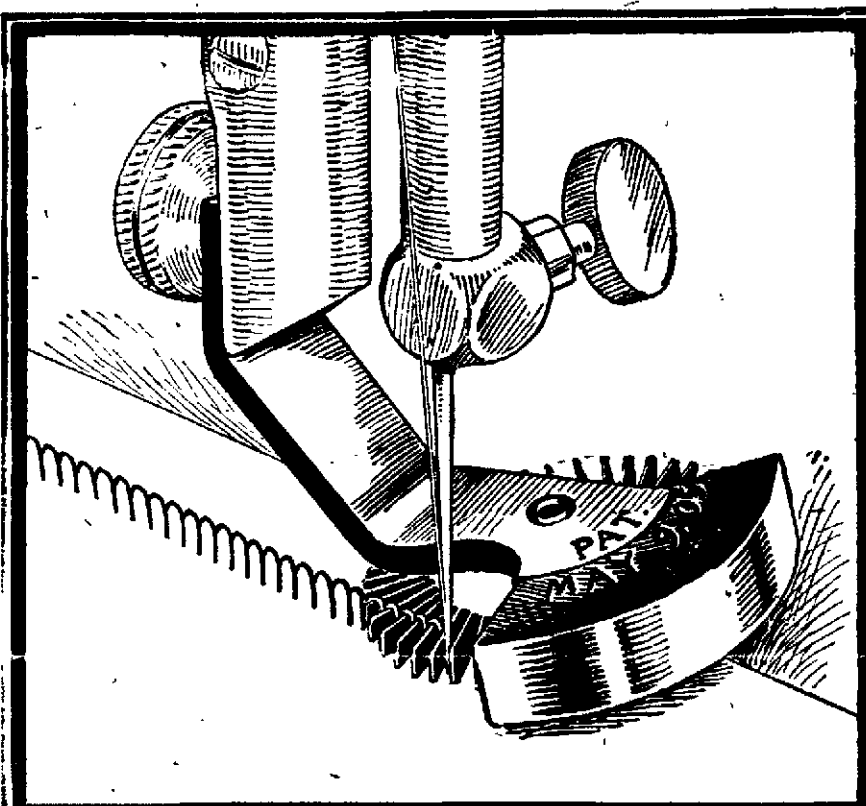

"I told you to leave us on my lips."

"Jack," she said, "when we're out of this horrid hole you can say all that if you want to. You may make the welkin ring with devotion. But you mustn't blame me—perhaps it's being over-civilized—but you look as though you had been fed through a steam-harvester, and I cannot let you love me till you are tidiest."

"No mistake about it," ejaculated the sheriff. "You are Cynthia Turtill, aged twenty, and I've been telegraphed from San Francisco to hold you and your companion as elopers; and what's more, Miss, your distracted popper will be here in an hour by special train."

"I tell you, you are making a mistake," said Edith. "I won't let you touch me."

"Now, see here," I said, strangling my anger and attempting to keep cool, our cell door. It was flung open by a short, elderly gentleman with crisp gray hair, and close behind him loomed the sheriff, and a stout lady, very much agitated, with her cap all awry on her head.

"Here they are, Mr. Turtill," said the sheriff.

I shall never forget the expression of that man's face as he stood and stared at us.

"This isn't my daughter," said Mr. Turtill.

"Oh, pa, where's Cynthia?" ejaculated the old lady.

The sheriff gazed at us with a jellied expression, as though we had somehow changed ourselves in the twinkling of an eye, like people in the Arabian Nights.

"And I let the special go!" groaned Mr. Turtill.

"It must have been Carson City after all," exclaimed his wife.

"Well, if I ain't dog-goned!" said the sheriff.

"There's our side of the story, too," I said truculently.

"It must have been—Carson City," said Mr. Turtill, oblivious to every word I had spoken.

"Take these things off, my hands instantly," I said to the sheriff.

"I told you all the time it was Carson City," said the old lady.

"It wasn't my fault, it was this idiot's here," said Mr. Turtill, awaking at last to the fact of my existence. "I can only say you must have acted scandalously to get yourselves mistaken for my daughter and that unprincipled viper that has run off with her."

I tried to keep my temper. "Mr. Turtill," I said, "I don't want to make a mountain out of this little misadventure. You've lost your daughter and I hope I am man enough to make some allowance for your feelings, even if you have lacerated mine and this young lady's, and humiliated us beyond anything."

"I will give you twenty-five dollars and not one cent more," he said defiantly.

"It's not a question of money at all," I said.

"Oh!" he said belligerently.

"Having put us in this position you must get us out of it," I said. "I will ask you and your wife to kindly take charge of this young lady for a night, and in that way, at least, save her from a most embarrassing position."

"I'm not accustomed to take charge of young ladies I don't know," returned Mr. Turtill.

I turned to Mrs. Turtill.

"Surely a woman will understand," I pleaded.

"Don't you try to get around my wife!" exclaimed Mr. Turtill. "I'm the head of this family, and when I say No, it's No!"

"But you are a mother!" I went on, disregarding the old fellow. "Imagine your own daughter in the place of my friend here—alone, unprotected."

"Oh, my poor lost Cynthia!" exclaimed the old lady, beginning to weep.

"I must insist on this young lady's claim to your consideration," I said.

"I insist on being left alone," roared Mr. Turtill. "I don't want any young lady but my daughter. If you pest-me any more, I'll have you arrested."

"You must get out of this cell, every one of you!" cried the sheriff with impartial ferocity.

"Where's your hat?" asked Edith, as we followed the Turtills out.

"I haven't any hat," I said. "I had once, but that was before I hit the sheriff."

"To think of being alone—at night—in a strange town—with a man who hasn't a hat!" said Edith.

"It's getting nightmarish," I said. The Turtills by right of precedence, were the first to alight; the hospitality of the Pacific Ocean House. When they had been polished off I approached the dark with some dim

"I want to make some explanation," I began, "of the extraordinary circumstances—the outrageous circumstances—"

"Oh, I know all about you," he said, cutting in. "You're the elopers."

"But—" I protested.

"Would you rather go out or be thrown out?" he said.

A baby: That which makes home happier, love stronger, patience greater, hands busier, nights longer, days shorter, the past forgotten, the future brighter.—Rupert's Magazine.

MILKING

If the milking must be done in stall, sprinkle the floor of it well before beginning, and once or twice a week put a lump of copperas in the sprinkler. Wash the whole udder very well, and wipe it dry, then wash hands, and put on a special milking garment, like a child's long apron, with elbow-sleeves. Tie a clean cloth over the hair. It has been found at the experiment stations that more than fifty per cent. of milk impurities get into it before it is ever strained, either from the milker, the cow herself, or the air of the milking place.

AT TABLE

IT is erect, neither lounge back, nor reach forward to catch mouthfuls. A gentleman waits until his hostess is seated, whether she is a great lady of fashion or his mother. A seat drawn too close to the table throws out the elbows; to sit too far away from it always crooks the back. The proper compromise is a position in which the waist or chest is about eight inches from the board.

While a meal is in progress it is both familiar and ungraceful to put the elbows on the table, trifle with the knives and forks, or clink the glasses together. When not actively occupied in eating, the hands should lie quietly in the lap, for nothing so marks the well-bred man or woman as a reposeful bearing at table.

LETTER WRITING

IN England the custom is to begin a note to an acquaintance with the form "Dear Mr. (or Mrs.) Jones," using the pronoun "my" only when Mr. (or Mrs.) Jones is a friend between whom and the writer a certain degree of intimacy exists. In America, the very opposite course is followed. "My Dear Mr. Jones" is regarded as the more formal opening. There are good reasons to be offered for either practice; but in America it is certainly better to follow the approved American usage, and let the pronoun appear only in the more ceremonious greeting.

By many punctilious men it is considered presumptuous to address a lady as "Dear Mrs. Blank" until she has first dropped the formal "my" with them; or as "My Dear Miss Brown," when her communications have invariably opened with the business-like "Dear Sir." It is quite allowable to begin a letter "Dear Miss," entirely omitting the name. "Madam" or "Dear Madam" is the proper address when writing to either a married or unmarried woman who is a stranger, or with whom the writer enjoys only the most formal acquaintance.

LAMP WICKS

GET the very best wicks, soft, of loose, rather coarse mesh, and big enough to fill the burner without any crowding or packing. A wick too small admits air into the oil tank, thus setting up vaporization. Further, it leaves a space for the passage of flame downward if a lamp is improperly blown out. The proper way, be it said, is across the flame, not from over-head. Buy, in bunches, wicks of sizes to fit every lamp in the house. Put all the bunches in a porcelain kettle, cover them with strong vinegar, bring the vinegar to a boil, and keep the kettle will keep warm for three hours. Drain out the wick-bunches, dry thoroughly, and keep away from dust. Wicks thus soaked and kept clean, both before and after going in the burner, almost never smoke.

In use trim the wicks once a week, but always very lightly and evenly, taking off the snuff—the burned part—but never any charred wick. Some excellent housekeepers, indeed, never put scissors upon a wick. Instead they turn the wicks up an inch, then, with a coarse cloth held over thumb and forefinger, rub and pinch off the snuff. Whether cut or pinched, the main thing is to leave the wicks without tag-ends or jagged places. Tag-ends and jagged places mean smoky and broken chimneys.

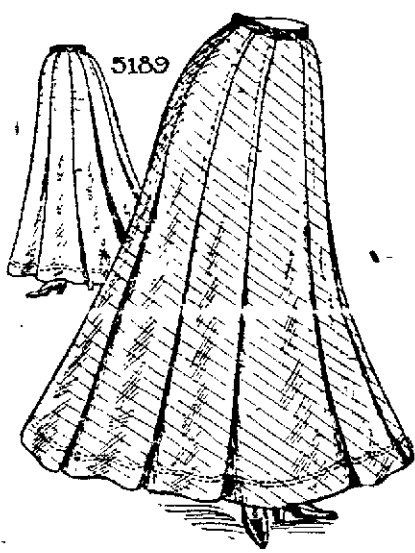

FLIRTATION

SP EAKING of women, we had an exhibition while in Tangier of the fact that women are much the same in all parts of the world. One of my chums and I were walking together, on a lonely road, about half a mile out of town, one day, when we noticed two young Moorish girls approaching us.

Their faces were covered with the conventional Mohammedan veil from their eyes down, but we could see, from the eyes and foreheads, that the girls were comely and, youngsters that we were, we looked rather closely at them. Then, to our surprise, followed all the little coquetties that accompany that pastime of youth commonly termed flirting or "mashing." The girls' eyes twinkled. We looked around at them; they looked around at us and, to our still greater astonishment, they removed the veils from their faces, which were smiling and mischievous. They were really quite pretty, in Moorish style, and we were about to cultivate the affair when several Moorish men in sight and the girls hastily veiled their faces and went their way without looking back again.

Selim, to whom we related the incident, told us that all kinds of awful things would have happened to the BLOUSE OR SHIRT-WAIST 5187. To Be Made With Long or Elbow Sleeves.

IN spite of the great popularity of the lingerie blouse, the simpler shirt-waist is always in demand. Here is one of the very newest that is eminently attractive and that gives the broad effect to the figure, that is so much in vogue just now, while it allows a choice of long or elbow sleeves. In the illustration it is made of white linen trimmed with pearl buttons, the collar combining a simple embroidered material with the plain, but it is adapted to all waistings and also to the simpler suiting materials. Indeed, to whatever can be made in shirt waist style. Silk waists are always in demand for travel and occasions of the sort and plaids are a fad of the season, while the list of washable fabrics is a long one.

The waist is made with fronts and back. The back is tucked from the neck to the waist line, while the fronts are arranged to give a double box plait at the center with single box plaits at the outer portion of the shoulders. The stock is a new one and is extended to form a tab. The long sleeves are in shirt-waist style but the short ones are finished with bands.

The quantity of material required for the medium size is 4 1/2 yards 21, 3 1/2 yards 27 or 2 1/2 yards 44 inches wide.

The pattern 5417 is cut in sizes for a 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42-inch bust measure.

SEVEN-GORED TUCKED WALKING SKIRT 5189.

None of the tucked or plaited skirts is better liked than this and none is more graceful or more generally becoming. It is quite simple, involves very little labor in the making, yet is absolutely graceful and takes most satisfactory lines and folds. Illustrated the material is royal blue cheviot stitched with belding silk, but all suiting and all skirting materials are available, broadcloth, homespun and the like as well as the lighter weight cashmere, Henrietta and silk.

The skirt is cut in seven gores, and is laid in tucks that are turned toward the front and that are stitched flat for graduated lengths, pressed into position below the stitchings. At the back the fullness is laid in inverted plaits and the closing is made invisibly beneath these last.

The quantity of material required for the medium size is 8 1/2 yards 27,

5 yards 44 or 4 1/2 yards 52 inches wide, if material has figure or nap; 6 1/2 yards 27, 3 1/2 yards 44 or 3 yards 52 inches wide if it has not.

Practical Hints on Garret Neatness

NEITHER garret nor cellar should be, as it too often is, the privileged abode of disorder. Both should be cleaned half-yearly, in spring and fall. House-cleaning, indeed, cannot begin in a better place than the garret, since, before it ends, good many things are likely to be sent there. Unless the garret is hopelessly cluttered, give it a coat of whitewash every spring. It need not be emptied; simply set things aside while going over one end, finish it, clean the floor, and cram everything into it, while the other end is made fresh.

Keep garret windows open, but fully screened, all through the hot weather. A frill of cheese-cloth tacked to the top of the screen-frame lets in air plentifully, and keeps out much dust. In spite of it, enough dust will get through to make a monthly sweeping worth while. No house can be cleanly with a reservoir of dry dust at the top forever sitting down.

Garrets are made for keeping things

—but not all things. Old shoes, for example. Bury, burn, give away, or sell them. With a single tree at hand it is sinful to keep the shoes out of the ground. Put them at least two feet down—nature and the tree-roots will do the rest. A grape-vine will transmute old leather into the fairest fruit and rank green leaves. In the range, under a layer of coal, old shoes make the very hottest ironing-irons.

It is foolish and dangerous to litter a garret with packing-stuff—straw, excelsior, wrapping-paper, and so on. If such things needs must be kept, make them into compact bundles, wire-bound, and plainly marked. A spark or dropped match is then no menace to life and property. Fires in thousands have been set by a spark or match falling among such substances. If the bundles are boxed, and set as far as possible from the windows, all the better. The garret, a sort of catch-all, is apt to be littered all over when cleaning begins. It cannot begin better than by thus lessening a very real danger.

Go through clothes-chests, hooks, and racks carefully, weeding out their contents. There are many things it is economy to throw away. Old hats, ragged furs, moth-eaten feathers, for example, which, each and several, may be a means of destruction to something of real value. Old felt hats must be exempted from the useless category. They can be turned into many things—iron-holders, kettle-holders, rubbing-pads for waxed floors, rounds to go upon chair and table legs.

Wipe off shelves with a cloth wet in camphor before laying bundles back upon them. After the floor has been well washed and dried, take a big paint brush and a can of benzine, and paint it all over, going at least six inches up the whitewashed wall. This is a preventive measure against rats, mice, roaches, etc. It must be done at mid-day with no artificial light anywhere about. The windows must stand open after it, and the door leading down should be kept closed for some hours, as the benzine vapor is highly inflammable.

Celebrating Wedding Anniversaries

THE order of wedding anniversaries runs as follows: First year, paper; leather; wooden; tenth, tin; twelfth, china; fifteenth, crystal; twentieth, silver; twenty-fifth, silver; thirtieth, silver; fortieth, woolen; forty-fifth, silk; fiftieth, golden; and seventy-fifth, diamond. It has now become distinctly the custom to overlook all the anniversaries until the first quarter of a century of married life has been passed. "Silver wedding" celebrations are frequent and may be charming social functions. There are divers ways of marking the twenty-fifth anniversary. To give a reception is most usual; to give a dinner party is next in favor; and to give a dance, following a dinner party or evening reception, is quite popular where there are unmarried daughters. But now and then the "silver wedding" is recognized in a more modest way—relatives and intimate friends only being invited to a small

at home, or to a small family dinner party.

At a reception, a husband should assist his wife in receiving; and if a dinner party is given, it quite agrees with the sentiment of the occasion for him to lead the way to the dining-room with his wife on his arm and for her to occupy a seat at his right hand, as she may have done at their wedding breakfast of long ago. Husbands there are who object to occupying so prominent a position, and prefer that the usual precedence at dinner parties should not be departed from. At an anniversary dinner there are few variations from the rules for ordinary dinners. The decorations should be white and green with silver, and bouquets of white flowers should be placed at every cover for the ladies, with bouquets for the men. If a guest drinks to the health of the happy pair, they smile and bow their thanks; and the husband is at liberty, if he has the desire and gift, to make a little speech expressive of his happiness and sweetened with grateful and graceful sentiments concerning his wife.

It is usual to cut an elaborate food cake at a silver wedding. The handsome loaf may appropriately bear the year of the first wedding and that of the anniversary, with the entwined monograms of the wife and husband. It is cut by the wife—at a reception, any time after a majority of the guests have arrived—at a dinner, when dessert is brought on. Champagne is usually poured at a wedding anniversary after it. The decorations should be white and green with silver, and bouquets of white flowers should be placed at every cover for the ladies, with bouquets for the men. If a guest drinks to the health of the happy pair, they smile and bow their thanks; and

Good Health == A FEW SIMPLE HINTS ON SIMPLE WAYS TO REMAIN WELL

ARTICLE NO. XI.
Some of our most simple troubles are the least understood. For instance, almost any pain in the lower part of the back is universally ascribed to the kidneys, whereas the truth is that fully ninety per cent. of such pains have not even the most remote connection with those organs. Rheumatism or neuralgic cold are usually the causes.

Headache, one of America's most common afflictions, often causes the sufferer to doctor for the most remote and complex causes, such as deranged liver, bowel trouble, kidney disease, etc., when, as a matter of fact, the trouble is due to eye-strain, which an oculist could correct almost at once.

Sore throat is almost always accepted as being due to a cold; yet any irritation of the membranes in the Breathing dust or smoke, getting some acid matter on the parts, swallowing some burning or biting stuff, may all cause it.

All of these common pains need prompt attention. In a healthy body any and every pain, however slight, is an indication of a disturbance that may or may not be serious, but certainly demands prompt correction. Therefore no pain or ache, however trivial, should be permitted to exist. But there is absolutely no profit in ascribing it to the wrong cause. That is worse than useless, because by doing it we introduce into our systems drugs that we do not need, and at the same time neglect the real trouble, which may be growing all the while.

But, it may be said, how is the ordinary person to tell? Shall he run to a doctor every time he feels a twinge?

It is not practicable. Nor would a doctor enjoy a practice where every patient rushes to him every little while for insignificant troubles.

What every person should do is to learn at least as much about his own body as he would naturally strive to know about any machine he buys. Every human being should know exactly where the lungs, liver, kidneys, stomach, intestines, appendix, etc., are situated. He should know something, too, about the more common symptoms of any trouble in these organs.

By this it is not meant that people should be their own doctors. They should strive merely to get an intelligent idea of their own bodies, such as any layman can acquire from the study of any good elementary text-book on anatomy. That would prevent much

UNHAPPY SPEECH

That speech was ill-advised," said a legislator, referring to a colleague's too outspoken address. "It reminds me of a speech that a widow made to her new husband on the honeymoon."

"O," she sighed, throwing herself in the man's arms, "how happy poor dear James would be if he could only know by what an agreeable gentleman he has been repaid!"

WIDOW'S CARDS

A widow is privileged either to retain her husband's Christian name on her card, or to substitute for it her own; as, for example, the widow of Donald Craig Leith may have her cards read either Mrs. Donald Craig Leith, or Mrs. Eleanor Philippa Leith. But it is rather the fashion at present for a widow or a woman who has been divorced to assume the deceased or divorced husband's name, as, for example, Mrs. Harrison Leith, Mrs. Leith's maiden name having been Harrison.

GAPING CUTS

FOR a gaping, bleeding cut, take a strip of court plaster two inches wide and rather longer than the cut. Fold it down the middle, and cut across the fold at eighth-inch distances, but do not let the cuts reach the edge. Leave at least a quarter-inch there. Then cut half the strips loose at one edge, the other half at the other. The result will be two toothed edges of the plaster. Moisten them, and apply one each side of the wound. Hold the edges of it together while the strips dry a bit, then moisten the teeth of each strip, and stick them down across the cut so as to hold its edges touching. This saves stitches, which are no end painful, and apt to leave ugly white scars.

INVITATIONS

FOR small dinners for not more than six or eight people most of whom are already acquainted with each other, the invitations are more appropriately issued in the form of brief friendly notes, as follows, and addressed to the wife when a married couple is invited:

24 Chestnut Square, Feb. 18, 19—.

My dear Mrs. Johnson: Will you and Mr. Johnson give us the pleasure of your company at dinner on Monday, the seventh, at eight o'clock?

Sincerely yours, Elizabeth Darrows Lane.

30 Hampden St., May 4th, 19—.

Dear Mr. Brookman:

We would be very pleased to have you dine with us on Monday next, the 12th, at seven o'clock, if convenient.

Cordially yours, Helen Clements.

DANCING

WHEN a young gentleman has found and reminded a lady of his claim upon her for the waltz at the moment of the music's beginning to sound, he bends before her bowing slightly, and if they are at some distance from the hall-room, offers her his right arm, to lead her to where the dancers are circling. There, with his right arm, he half encircles her waist, laying his hand not up near the shoulder blades, but lower—just above the waist line, and, to be explicit, directly over the back bone. Taking her right hand in his left, he holds it almost at arm's length, not lower than the level of her waist line nor higher than her shoulder. If she face he turns slightly to the left. When so holding her, she is drawn into exactly the proper attitude for graceful and easy dancing.

It is grotesque for dancers to thrust out their arms stiff and straight from their shoulders, or for the man to lift the lady's right hand high in the air, holding it somewhat behind him. He is obliged to support and guide her, at the same time taking care not to collide with other couples; and if he does not reverse, it is discreet to halt at intervals, after gliding somewhat out of the path followed by those who are swifter and more accomplished.

LADY LAURIER

LADY LAURIER, wife of the Premier of Canada, is described as a stately, white-haired woman endowed with all the alertness and natural grace of her French lineage. Though of French origin, Lady Laurier speaks English almost as well as her husband does. Educated at the Convent of the Good Shepherd in Montreal, she remains a strict Roman Catholic, but without bigotry and narrowness. She is proud of her French descent, although she has always had the tact to aim at breaking down any approach to a barrier between the two races in Canada. When the confederate Parliament is sitting Lady Laurier lives at her Ottawa residence in Laurier avenue, a large, square house typical of the style of architecture which is prevalent in upper Canada. Lady Laurier was born in the city of Montreal, Quebec, during the session of the Canadian Parliament. She is now 65 years of age. During the session Lady Laurier calls daily at the House of Commons to drive Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Canadian Prime Minister, and his wife are fond of city life and society, but their happiest times are spent at their country home, Atholville, in the comfortable little two-story red brick house stands on a knoll in the midst of park land, much of which is left in its primeval ruggedness. Domestic simplicity marks their life. They escape from the heat and dust of the Ottawa season to the calm of the rural retreat, and they receive their guests every day on the piazza with a dignity and hospitality characteristic of Canadians.

Lady Laurier lives among her plants and flowers and domestic pets and is known in all the country around as a kind and delightful neighbor. She has no family of her own, but delights in gathering children around her. She is never seen on political platforms or signing her name to a magazine arti-

CANARY HINTS

ILL the bath every morning, the bird will decide whether or no he needs a bath. In cold weather take the chill off the water, and if the bird picks himself, pecking out feathers, and several drops of rose-water in the bath. If the bird keeps on until there are bare places, rub them over with the sulphur ointment, flowers of sulphur and fresh butter in equal parts, and use the rose-water every day. Rub in the ointment very lightly, touching only the affected spots. The day's just underneath the wings where they leave the body, and the back of the neck.

Canaries, indeed, all cage-birds, suffer occasionally from cold of the glands. The oil-gland is situated just at the root of the tail, and from it a healthy bird each day dresses his plumage. If by any chance the oil glands in it, it at once makes the bird ill. He sits quiet and droopy upon his perch, not with hanging wings to be sure, but looking as though, like Lancelot of the Lake, he were disgusted with "love, life, all things." Take him gently in the hand, blow apart the feathers at the root of the tail, and look at the oil-gland. If it is swollen and inflamed, press it very gently, but do not try to force the oiled oil directly up the gland. Will almost certainly kill the bird. Drop warm soap-suds gently upon the gland, using a medicine dropper, then dry it with a soft handkerchief, and apply a very little vaseline. Next day examine again and repeat the treatment, keeping it up day after day until the softened gland frees itself.

I waited for her to speak, but she, with a hesitating movement, shut the door in our faces and double-locked it on the inner side.

Edith had borne up pretty bravely, but her eyes had been swimming all the while in the dark, nicely and bravely, but now she began to sob, and I put my arms around her and tried to comfort her, but she pushed me away.

"Edith," I said, "well just go back to that mystery!"

"Well, Jack," she exclaimed, "I can't love you!" I said, "I love you!" "I did think of it at the time," she said, with a ghost of a smile. "But you were so stupid about it, and it seemed more your place than mine to suggest it."

"I never dreamed of such a thing," I exclaimed.

"It's sneaky," she broke out. "It's awful. They'll never believe that I don't run away together!"

"We've come back to be married." It was worth money to see that man smile. He took us into a horsehair parlor and loved us, and then ran up a couple of witnesses from the Ivory Stable. It took about nine minutes to get us, and in ten he was a "don't-care-it" man, not to speak of the profit he made on the ring, and the two stable men were five dollars each to the good.

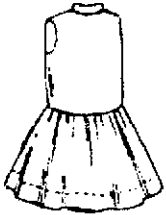

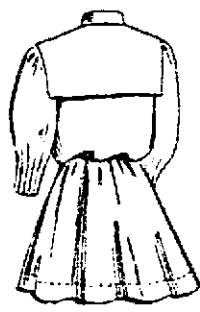

"Now lend me a hat and coat," I said, "and lead us over to the hotel and vouch for us!"

He rigged me out in a frock coat and a hand hat—apparently this was his costume on Sundays,—and then the three of us went back to the Pacific Ocean House, walking slowly on account of Edith's foot, and lined up before the impressive clerk.

"It's all right, Jim," said the minister, laying the marriage certificate on the desk.

But the clerk was of too proud a nature to show the least surprise. He glanced at the certificate as he might have done to a baggage check; and then, pushing a book toward me, handing me a pen, ready dipped in ink, laconically remarked:

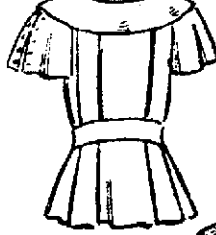

FOR SCHOOL DAYS

SMALL checks, plaids and stripes are very smart and make the most serviceable of school dresses. The rich plaids are becoming more and more popular, and are exceedingly handsome in the soft silk and wool materials. White serge is deservedly popular, as it launders excellently and may be prettily trimmed with colored braids in a variety of ways. Black and white checks in flannel and mohair make up stylishly and continue to meet with favor for misses. White pique is preferred by many mothers all the year round for the small girl. No material is smarter for the Russian blouse and sailor dress.

The graceful lines of the stylish little guimpe frock shown in No. 5716. It may be worn either with or without the guimpe, and slips on easily over the head. A circular collar is a pretty feature; slashes are made in the ends through which a broad silk tie is passed and tied in front. The edges of the slashes are bound or buttonholed with silk. The sleeve caps are cut open to the shoulders and are trimmed with buttons and simulated buttonholes. The heavy washable fabrics as well as the soft light-weight woollens are adaptable to the new stylish plaids especially. For a girl of six years 2½ yards of 36-inch material will be required.

GIRLS' BOX-PLEATED DRESS. No. 5716. Sizes for 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 years.

The simple little blouse dress illustrated is made of blue and green plaid material. A fitted body lining supports the full blouse waist that is laid in fine tucks across the front on each side of the centre box-pleat. The sleeves, elbow length, may be lengthened by the addition of deep cuffs. The straight skirt is simply finished by a deep hem and is gathered and attached to the waist. The mode is practical and adapted alike to the light-weight woollens and cotton fabrics. Cashmere, serge, challis, linen and gingham are suggested. For a girl of ten years 2½ yards of 36-inch material will be required.

GIRLS' DRESS. No. 5754. Sizes for 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12 years.

The popularity of the sailor suit seems to increase rather than diminish. The smart little model in No. 5718 is of excellent style and adapted to many materials. The full straight skirt is gathered and attached to a body lining. The blouse is becomingly full and the neck finished by a broad sailor collar, trimmed with braid. A jaunty black silk tie is a stylish addition. Serge, mohair, flannel, pique and gingham may be used. For a child of eight years 3½ yards of material 36 inches wide will be required.

GIRLS' SAILOR SUIT. No. 5718. Sizes for 6, 8, 10 and 12 years.

There are many variations of the guimpe modes for little girls, but nothing simpler or daintier than this little one-piece model developed in the fashionable plaid suiting. The dress is made to slip on easily over the head, back and front being cut exactly alike. The guimpe is of white muslin, trimmed with fancy tucking and lace insertion. The neck is finished by a standing collar and the fulness at the waistline is adjusted by a drawstring in a casing. The sleeves are in full length completed by narrow bands. The dress may be developed in mohair, cashmere, pongee, albatross, delaine, pique and gingham. For a girl of six years two yards of material 36 inches wide will be required for the dress and 1½ yards for the guimpe.

CHILD'S ONE-PIECE DRESS WITH GUIMPE. No. 5700. Sizes for 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10 years.
